RANGER REPORTS—John Wade, King City ranger for the state division of Forestry, is shown at last night's meeting of the farmers' advisory committee on fire prevention and control, addressing 70 persons representing local, state and federal government agencies, ranchers and railroad men.

Cooperation Cited in Fire Control Success

KING CITY—Close cooperation among Monterey county fire prevention groups is credited with keeping fire damage low during the recent fire season.

In a year termed by a state ranger as "the worst potential for forest fires the world has ever had," the county's record was well below the state average and only slightly above the total number for 1960.

These facts were emphasized by a host of speakers at last night's bi-annual meeting of the county farmers advisory committee on fire prevention and control at Vannotti's restaurant.

Many Groups

This unique "ex-officio" body, organized in 1943 and apparently growing stronger each year, includes fire fighters of county, state and federal groups, the south county's two military installations, Southern Pacific railroad and numerous area ranchers.

Fire damage in SoMoCo was generally less than expected, a fact some attributed to luck while other speakers said that this enviable record was achieved because of close liaison and improved scientific fire control plans.

All agreed that the advisory committee had proved its usefulness and should be strengthened.

Paul Aurignac, well-known San Ardo rancher and state forestry board member, told the 70 persons present, "our program might become a model for the entire state."

As one of the committee's organizers and still-active members Aurignac recently testified before a state Senate fact-finding committee on fire control.

Efforts Praised

Sen. Fred Farr (D-Carmel) praised Aurignac's efforts and commended the advisory body "for this wonderful example of cooperation."

Assemblyman Alan G. Pattee (R-Salinas) echoed his colleague's remarks and told of a personal bout with rampaging fire, recalling one disastrous fire of the 1950's in Corral de Tierra.

He credited prompt and efficient fire fighting with saving his ranch.

Officials agreed that this last year was most dangerous for several reasons. Among them was that this was the third dry year in a row for the Salinas Valley, and there was a June heat wave which cooked vegetation in many places. The increased number of tourists and campers in dry areas was cited.

Among other officials attending were John Wade, King City ranger for the state division of forestry, who gave a statistical review of the last

Mexican Scouts

Mexican Boy Scouts Tour the Peninsula

Five Boy Scouts representing four Mexico City scout troops are on the Peninsula this week as part of an exchange program for Scouts started by Sen. Fred S. Farr.

The boys, ranging in age from 13-years-old to 19-years-old, are touring points of interest under the guidance of Warren Merritt, district scout executive.

Emilio de La Pena, 15, who says he has been studying English since the first grade, serves as interpreter for the group. Merritt admits that he can't speak a word of Spanish.

While on the Peninsula, the scouts are "roughing it" by camping out at Camp Pico Blanco near Little Sur.

After touring Holman's Department Store yesterday, the group visited The Herald office and then planned to walk through a supermarket. Although there are department stores and supermarkets in Mexico City, the group was fascinated while touring Holman's, according to Merritt.

In Mexico there are three divisions for Boy Scouts, 7-11 years, cubs; 12-17 years, boy and wolf; and 18-25 years, rover.

The group will spend one day in San Francisco as guests of the Salinas Valley Growers Assn. and then take a plane back to Mexico on Saturday.

Sheriff Nabs South Coast Man for Dope

South Coast resident Roland Ferrell Hall, 27, who has had experience as an artist, undertaker and midwife, yesterday was arrested by sheriff's deputies for dabbling in a farming venture.

He was charged with possessing and cultivating marijuana.

Several weeks ago, Hall gained attention when he buried his own father on property about three miles from Lucia. That same week, he delivered his wife of a baby in the couple's home.

The property on which the Hall's home is located is owned by State Sen. Fred Farr of Carmel, attorney William K. Stewart of Pebble Beach, Architect Will Shaw and others. Farr today said he was "surprised and shocked" that marijuana was being grown on his land.

Arraignment Set

Hall today waived a preliminary hearing in Monterey Municipal Court on the felony charge. He will be arraigned in Salinas on Sept. 1.

Capt. Darol Smith, chief of the inspector's division for the sheriff's office, said today that Hall denied growing marijuana but curiously admitted that he has smoked it and is acquainted with its effects.

Smith said the marijuana was being grown in a type of "nursery" about 1,500 feet from Hall's house on Big Creek Ranch, about two miles east of Highway 1.

Officers seized 11 containers containing an average of about four plants per container. The plants are enormous. Some of them are over 10 feet high. Smith said that marijuana will grow this high and even higher under ideal conditions. "And in this case, the conditions were ideal."

Smith said neighboring ranchers discovered the marijuana crop some time ago and notified the sheriff's office.

Smith said the potted marijuana plants were being kept in a wire enclosure about 10 feet square. There was a water tank nearby and the plants also were being watered from a bucket placed under the seepage of a spring.

Sheriff Vic Tibbs said he has seen larger crops of marijuana before in Monterey County but "I've never seen any plants this high."

Hall has served as caretaker on the land for Farr and Stewart. He also reported that he is an artist and has some paintings now hanging in a gallery near Big Sur.

The plants were removed to the sheriff's office in Salinas where they were to be kept pending outcome of proceedings against Hall.

Details of Senior Citizens Measure Explained in Monterey

A bill aimed at keeping California's senior citizens active was explained for some 60 representatives from coast county recreation and welfare departments at the Casa Munras yesterday.

Introduced in the California Senate as "Community Services for Older Persons," the intent of the bill is to allow aged persons to "remain active and contributing members of their community."

Author of the bill, passed by the 1961 legislature and signed into law by the governor, is Sen. Fred S. Farr (D-Carmel).

The legislation set up a pilot program through which cities, counties, school districts or recreation districts may obtain matching funds from the state for development of senior citizen projects.

As an addition to the California Welfare and Institutions Code, the bill authorizes the California Department of Social Welfare to establish criteria for projects and to screen applications for project funds.

Funds

Funds are to be made available on a 50 per cent matching basis. However, the political subdivision which makes application may put up property or services in lieu of cash as its half of the senior citizen project. A $150,000 sum has been budgeted this year for the program.

Mrs. A. M. G. Russell, chairman of the state Citizens' Advisory Committee on Aging, explained the measure. Farr was present at the session.

The Monterey meeting was one of a series being held at various cities throughout the state.

Commenting on the need for such a program, Farr reported that 12,385 persons in Monterey County are over age 65—a total of 6.24 per cent of the county's total population. He added that 1,376,204 persons in the state, 8.76 per cent of the total population, are over 65. The senator said one out of five of these people receives Old Age Security benefits. Approximately 869,000 persons in California over 65 receive an income of less than $2,000 per year.

Things which might be provided by communities through funds made available by the bill are employment counseling service, rehabilitation for the handicapped, homemaker for partially disabled persons and conventional recreation facilities.

Farr said persons who desire further information may write Community Services for Older Persons, Project Director, State Department of Social Welfare, 722 Capitol Ave., Sacramento 14.

Present

Among those present at the session were Barbara S. Brown, county public health nurse; Peter Aldrete, Monterey recreation director; James Donahue, Salinas recreation director; Jeanne Link, Monterey senior citizens activities coordinator; Mrs. Minnie Coyle, Monterey city councilwoman; and representatives from Santa Cruz, Santa Clara and San Benito county social service departments.

County Checks Idea of Coast Route 'Toll Road'

SALINAS—County officials may ask the state to make the Coast Highway a toll road to protect its scenic beauty.

County Planning Director Ed DeMars said yesterday his department is investigating the possibility after it was suggested by a coast resident.

DeMars said he did not know if a toll road on a state highway was legal, and that his department would ask the state for its opinion.

"We're checking on the legality of it now," DeMars said, "but it's too soon to say."

Follows Plan

DeMars said he felt the toll idea would fit into the Coast Master Plan being prepared for presentation to the county next month. The plan envisions a low speed, scenic road which would discourage through traffic.

DeMars said he didn't think there were any such toll roads in the state, and he knew only of a few toll bridges.

The plan might out, he said, by giving residents along the highway either a pass or by charging them a small amount a year, such as is done in Del Monte Forest. DeMars said he did not think any attempt should be made to control access to the highway from roads which intersect it along the route. The only control, he said, would be at either end of the highway.

Many Plans

Numerous plans have been suggested in recent years to protect the highway from development. State Sen. Fred Farr (D-Carmel) succeeded in getting the highway taken out of the state freeway plan. A national parkway has been suggested, which would put the highway under federal control, and make it a long park area. Coast residents have objected to this, however, saying they want to keep local control.

The county has also talked of having the highway designated a scenic highway.

Hearing

State planners Harry Freeman, left, and William F. Lippman flank Sen. Fred Farr at interdepartmental hearing on scenic highways which was held today in Carmel.

Ask Action On Scenic Highways

An interdepartmental state committee formed to study the problem of scenic highways was urged repeatedly in Carmel this morning to use all possible speed in setting up a workable program.

The committee met in the Carmel City Hall with members of a state-wide advisory committee, plus organizations from throughout the state interested in highway development. The committee was formed through the efforts of State Sen. Fred Farr (D-Carmel).

Committee members said this morning that they will make a report to the State Legislature on March 15, 1962, on their progress. The report will contain its findings on what are the practical methods of setting up a scenic highway program.

He said the remaining 20 per cent was new material, some of it interesting and constructive.

Plan Hit

Roosevelt attacked both the Campbell plan and what he called its "new paper-back edition" as nothing

Farr Bill

The report will then go to legislative committees, and hearings will be held on the suggestions before January, 1963. Farr said this morning that he will introduce a bill in 1963 calling for scenic highways to be set up throughout the state.

William Lippman, assistant state planner, said this morning that while the committee will be very useful, it isn't the whole answer.

"You can preserve the scenic resources of the counties in Sacramento," he said. "You have to do a great deal of it on the local level."

Farr suggested that the committee might draw up a list of standards which counties could use for designating certain highways as scenic highways. Farr said that when the state was ready to institute its program, there would then at least be a basis on which to start.

Hear Plan

The committee heard a description of the Coast Highway Master Plan this morning from Gordon Monterey planning consultant. Bruce Kilgore, Sierra Club praised the efforts of State Sen. Fred Farr (D-Carmel) and Farr for "leading the way," not only in the but throughout the state, in the fight to preserve scenic roadways.

The committee will meet again with its advisory group in Sacramento Dec. 12, and consider a timetable for submitting its report to the Legislature.

The committee said this morning that it was down in Carmel to be brought up to date on the progress of the Coast Highway Master Plan, and to get public opinion of the development of scenic highways.

Board Sees Jail

SALINAS — State Sen. Fred Farr (D-Carmel) this morning suggested a bond issue to finance a new county jail, but supervisors indicated they definitely were opposed to the idea.

The suggestion came after a tour of the jail by county and state officials and members of the grand jury. The inspection was called after Assemblyman Vernon Kilpatrick (D-Los Angeles) made an unexpected visit to the jail Tuesday and termed it "filthy."

Farr, who arrived too late for the tour today, joined with Assemblyman Alan Pattee (R-Corral de Tierra) in suggesting a bond issue in the future to replace the 30-year-old jail which generally is filled beyond capacity.

Tom Hudson, chairman of the board of supervisors, told Farr he didn't like a bond issue because "we are on a pay-as-you-go policy."

"That may be your policy but you may have to change it," Farr said.

Farr said the board should plan ahead 20 to 25 years for jail facilities. "You shouldn't sit around and say everything is perfect," he said. "The jail is overcrowded and you have problems."

Hudson said the supervisors recently hired architects to draw up plans to remodel the third floor of the jail for more prisoner space. Farr asked Sheriff Vic Tibbs how long it would be before prisoners would fill the new floor if one floor were remodeled.

"About 30 minutes," Tibbs said.

Hudson then pointed out that the board also was considering adding another floor.

Farr also suggested that a citizens committee be appointed to inspect the jail periodically and to make reports and recommendations to the proper authorities. He said he would make a formal request at a future board meeting but got little response on the suggestion today.

Kilpatrick, who is chairman of the subcommittee on correctional facilities of the committee on criminal procedure, complained Tuesday that the jail was dirty, saying some scrubbing and general cleaning-up was in order. He made the inspection at about 2:30 p.m.

Cleaning Time
The tour today started at 9:30 a.m. Prisoners were busy mopping floors, dusting window sills and straightening up bunks. Tibbs said the cleaning was done each morning at this time.

Portions of the jail had been straightened up since Kilpatrick's inspection. A large pile of cardboard boxes had been removed from the stairwell at the entrance to the third floor. Hudson said he had gone through earlier and had the boxes removed because he was afraid today's party couldn't get past them.

The dirty laundry in the women's section which had attracted Kilpatrick's attention Tuesday also was gone today. The matron said Tuesday was laundry day. None had collected since then.

Recently Mopped
The floors were recently mopped this morning. Tibbs said the jail is always cleaner in the morning and that if an inspection were made this afternoon conditions would be somewhat worse. Kilpatrick also complained about "dirty pictures" on the walls of the cells. Pattee, looking at one of them today, said, "I have one like that hanging in my dairy barn."

All supervisors and Tibbs were upset this morning over a picture published in another newspaper showing the Rev. Laurence T. Nutting of Seaside, one of Tuesday's inspection party, leaning with one foot on the jail wall. "That's exactly why we can't keep our jail clean," Tibbs said.

Attorney Nielsen Invited to Testify at Jail Hearing Jan. 15

MONTEREY — Atty. James R. Nielsen of Carmel, arch-foe of the Monterey county jail, has been invited to the Jan. 15 meeting of the state Assembly's subcommittee of criminal procedure on custodial institutions by chairman Vernon Kilpatrick.

He'll probably have a lot of Monterey county company, too. Supervisor Tom Hudson of the Monterey Peninsula district has been delegated by the board to speak for the county at the meeting, and Chairman Burt Talcott has been told by Kilpatrick that he'll be subpoenaed to attend.

Kilpatrick's committee will be discussing jails in Monterey, Merced, Madera and Del Norte counties at the meeting. The Democratic assemblyman from Lynwood has inspected all four jails and found them somewhat wanting.

Nielsen, who sought a writ of habeas corpus to free county jail prisoner Miss Helen C. Peak and all other second floor inmates, suffered a setback when the first district court of appeals yesterday denied the writ without even a hearing. Superior court Judge Anthony Brazil did the same thing in an earlier proceeding.

"I wouldn't miss this meeting for the world," Nielsen said yesterday. "The fur is really going to fly." He added that the appeal court's denial of his petition for a writ of habeas corpus without a hearing was "hard to believe."

The denial brings his efforts on Miss Peak's behalf to an end. She's to be released from jail, having served out her sentence for drunkenness, on Tuesday.

The state supreme court, to which Nielsen could appeal the decision of the first district court of appeals, doesn't meet for conference until Wednesday.

Nielsen indicated that he's not given up the fight to have the second floor of the jail cleared out. He said he still is not soliciting clients from amongst the inmates; but "a couple" of them have telephoned him already.

Farr Is Subpoenaed For Hearing on Jail

State Sen. Fred S. Farr (D-Carmel) said today he's being subpoenaed to attend the Assembly interim subcommittee of criminal procedure on custodial institutions' hearing on the Monterey county jail situation in Sacramento on Jan. 15.

Sen. Farr will join an ever-growing Monterey county contingent at the hearings, which now includes Monterey Peninsula Supervisor Tom

General Situation
"The highway patrol called me this morning and said it has a subpoena from Assemblyman Vernon Kilpatrick for me, so I imagine I'll be at the hearing," Sen. Farr said. He added that he imagined he would be called on to discuss the state correctional facility situation generally, because he headed up a Senate committee which last spring released a report on just that subject.

Sen. Farr's committee on correctional facilities has now been placed under the senate judiciary committee.

Yesterday afternoon Hudson told the board of supervisors that he plans to subpoena Kilpatrick to appear before the board "to find out what the motive of the unwarranted and unfounded charges he's made against the See HEARING Page 2 county of Monterey in the operation of its jail is."

"Let's put the shoe on the other foot," he said. "We're tired of being pushed around by the state of California."

Kilpatrick inspected the county jail last summer and called it a "filthy contraption." Hudson and other supervisors took exception to Kilpatrick's report, and a running feud has been carried on ever since.

Of his subpoena to appear before Kilpatrick's committee Jan. 15, Hudson said "this is a typical example of a move to step in and take over county functions (i. e. the operation of the jail.) We've seen it in the attack the state made on our welfare department. This is the second assault on the county government in a year." He added that the county had some success in battling the state on the welfare issue.

Farr Deplores Subpoenas in Jail Battle

The "battle of the subpoenas," centering on Monterey County jail arguments, was deplored last night by State Sen. Fred Farr (D-Carmel).

"The real question is what is to be done about the jail," Farr said at a meeting of the county Democratic central committee here at the courthouse.

Farr, himself under subpoena to appear at a Sacramento hearing, referred to the clash between Tom Hudson, former chairman of the county board of supervisors, and Assemblyman Vernon Kilpatrick, the jail's chief critic, who has called the Sacramento hearing.

CARMEL — "Monterey County should definitely retain control of its jail facilities," State Sen. Fred Farr (D-Carmel) said Tuesday.

Farr said he expects to be served with a subpoena to appear before a State Senate Interim Committee investigating Monterey County jail.

He said he has been informed by the Highway Patrol that a subpoena was expected and would be served as soon as it arrived in Sacramento.

Farr added that he might not be able to attend the opening day of the hearing in Sacramento on Jan. 15 because of an education committee hearing he is attending in Bakersfield the same day.

"But I assume I'll be there on the second day, Jan. 16," he said.

Farr took a swipe at Supervisor Tom Hudson of Point Lobos, remarking:

"Let's get our eyes off personalities and get the solution to our jail problems."

Hudson, who has also been subpoenaed to appear before the committee Monday, said he would seek a subpoena requesting the Assembly committee chairman, Vernon Kilpatrick (D-Lynwood) appear at hearings before county supervisors in Salinas Jan. 22.

Kilpatrick kicked off the battle over the county jail last summer when he called it "filthy" following a surprise inspection.

"The idea of a supervisor subpoenaing an assemblyman to appear before it is a bunch of nonsense," Farr said.

Meanwhile, Helen Peak, 44, of Monterey, was released Tuesday morning from the county jail.

Miss Peak figured in a writ of habeas corpus which was filed to free her and all other prisoners on the second floor of the jail on grounds it was a fire hazard. The writ was denied.

The attorney who filed it, James Nielson of Carmel, also has been subpoenaed to appear before the committee as has Dr.

Myron Husband, Monterey County Health Director.

Farr emphasized that he has always been for local control of county jails.

Pointing to the report of the Senate Fact Finding Committee on Correctional facilities which he headed in 1957, Farr read:

"Local control is more efficient and less costly than that of the State."

Farr said Monterey County jail was "not a good jail."

"It's not one of the worst but it's not one of the best either," he said.

Hudson Says He Will Request Hearing Subpoena for Kilpatrick

Peninsula Supervisor Tom Hudson, subpoenaed yesterday by Assemblyman Vernon Kilpatrick (D-Lynwood), decided today that what's sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander.

He said he will request a subpoena for Kilpatrick, either from the board of supervisors or the grand jury.

"We have a right to hear from Mr. Kilpatrick what's behind his attacks on our county jail, which is better than the average jail in the state," Hudson declared.

The supervisor denounced the subpoena actions against himself and County Health Officer Dr. Myron Husband as unprecedented and bad manners.

"It's like me subpoenaing Gov. Brown," Hudson said, explaining that a simple invitation was customary in such cases.

Got Letter

"I received a letter, and I had planned to attend his hearing. No subpoena was necessary."

The hearing is scheduled for Monday at 10 a.m. in Room 2170 of the Capitol building in Sacramento.

Kilpatrick will conduct it as chairman of the Subcommittee on Custodial Institutions of the Assembly Interim Committee on Criminal Procedures.

"The issue is whether Monterey County is going to stand up and be counted as a county that won't allow the state to come in and take over its institutions," Hudson declared.

"We have already seen what happened in regard to freeways."

Hudson warned "this is nothing more than an attempt to take over. Next will be a state police force, then state operation of welfare and planning."

Found OK

He said the local jail has been inspected yearly by the grand jury and found to be satisfactory.

It has been cleared by federal inspectors and the state's own department of corrections, Hudson pointed out.

"If we followed their recreation plan for county jails, we might as well install wall-to-wall carpeting and pass out pajamas."

He said he plans to ask Kilpatrick, when the county's turn comes, how the state feels qualified to give advice on local jails when it can't operate its own institutions properly.

He cited five killings in five weeks at Soledad and San Quentin prisons and a narcotics operation at San Quentin.

"Their prisons are more overcrowded than our jail," he added.

Inspection Due

Dr. Husband said he will make an inspection of the jail late today or tomorrow and compile an up-to-date report for the hearing.

He added that an inspection made by his office two months ago showed the jail to be in satisfactory condition from a health standpoint.

Kilpatrick had denounced it as a "filthy contraption" following a tour last summer.

Also expected to attend the Sacramento hearing is Carmel attorney James Nielson, who failed in two attempts during the past month to empty the second floor of the jail on grounds that it is unsafe.

Nielson received an invitation from Kilpatrick, and said he "wouldn't miss this meeting for the world."

Subpoena 'Swap' Jail Dispute

State Assemblyman Tom Hudson, Monterey County Health Officer Dr. Myron Husband, and County Health Officer Dr. Myron Husband, Monterey County Health Director.

Johnny Johansen, a deputy sheriff in Carmel Valley, was fired on charges he helped one of the jail prisoners get in touch with James Nielson of Carmel, the attorney who filed the writ.

Johansen subsequently announced his candidacy for sheriff. And his former boss, Sheriff Victor Tibbs, recovering from a heart attack, followed it up with the announcement that he was still a candidate to succeed himself in the June election.

Hudson has long contended that the State was using Kilpatrick's charges as the basis to take over county operations.

"If they're so interested in the condition of our jail," he said, "they ought to investigate the five murders in recent weeks in San Quentin, their own institution."

Other supervisors said they felt that they should be sure plans for the jail remodeling would meet State approval. They indicated that Hudson had their blessings in asking for the subpoena for Kilpatrick.

Hudson must get approval of the majority of supervisors before he can act officially on the subpoena.

Jail Probers Will Hear Undersheriff

SALINAS — Undersheriff blyman Vernon Kilpatrick Carol Joy has been subpoenaed to appear before an Assembly subcommittee investigating the condition of Monterey County Jail.

Joy joins a growing list of officials and citizens who will appear before Assem-

Others are State Sen. Fred Farr (D-Carmel), Monterey Peninsula Supervisor Tom Hudson, County Health Director Myron Husband and Carmel Attorney James Nielsen.

Kilpatrick, who labeled the jail "a filthy contraption" after he made a surprise inspection of it last summer, had originally subpoenaed Sheriff Victor Tibbs. He switched to Joy, however, after Tibbs' doctor requested the sheriff not be disturbed. Tibbs is recovering from a heart attack.

Hudson, angered at what he calls Kilpatrick's attempt to force state control on the County, has asked for a subpoena requesting Kilpatrick's appearance before county supervisors.

Cast Is Announced for Jail Hearing at Capital

The cast of characters for next Monday's Assembly subcommittee hearing on jail conditions in Monterey county was announced today by Assemblyman Vernon Kilpatrick (D-Lynwood), the chairman.

Room 2170 in the Capitol building in Sacramento will be the scene for the hearing, which is likely to bring the running battle between state and county officials over the jail to a head. It will start at 10 a.m.

Kilpatrick's interim committee on criminal procedure, an off-season branch of the Assembly subcommittee on custodial institutions, will be taking testimony from five state officials and one announced foe of the Monterey county jail before county Supervisor Tom Hudson and county Health Director Dr. Myron Husband have a chance to say anything.

Monterey county Sheriff Victor V. Tibbs also was subpoenaed, but he was excused because he's recovering from a heart attack and is unable to travel.

Representatives of Sacramento, Madera, Merced and Del Norte counties also have been subpoenaed to testify at the hearing concerning conditions at their jails.

Here are the six principal witnesses listed by Kilpatrick on the subcommittee agenda:

1. Atty. James R. Nielsen of Carmel. Nielsen will testify on "prisoners' legal rights to minimum standards of detention." He recently sought a writ of habeas corpus to obtain the freedom of prisoners on the jail's second floor because, he said, the jail was a firetrap. Superior court Judge Anthony Brazil and the first district court of appeals in San Francisco both tossed the case out of court.

Attorney Says Jail Unsafe, Asks Writ To Clear 2nd Floor

SALINAS — A Carmel attorney has filed for a writ of habeas corpus which could force closure of half the facilities at the Monterey County jail here.

James Nielsen of Carmel asks release of Helen Peak, serving a 40-day drunk driving sentence and a 60-day common drunk sentence on the grounds that the second story of the jail is "dangerous and unsafe."

Nielsen also asks removal of "all other prisoners" confined on the second floor of the jail.

Attached to the writ is a letter from the State Fire Marshall to Sheriff Victor Tibbs. The letter, mailed in December of 1959, makes various safety recommendations for the jail.

Undersheriff Carol F. Joy said all the fire marshal's requests have been complied with except for those which will involve major construction.

"County supervisors have already given the architects the go ahead signal for plans for a $375,000 remodeling and expansion program for the jail," he said.

"I'm meeting with architects and the State Department of Corrections on the matter next Wednesday."

The second floor of the jail contains facilities for confinement of 48 prisoners including 15 women. This is just under half the capacity of the jail.

Superior Judge Anthony Brazil has set Dec. 26 at 1:15 p.m. as the time for a hearing on the writ.

The County Jail came under fire this fall from Assemblyman Vernon Kilpatrick (D-Los Angeles).

Kilpatrick, a member of the Assembly Committee on Crimes and Corrections, made a surprise inspection of the jail and termed it "filthy and inadequate."

Following a subsequent tour, County Supervisors claimed Kilpatrick was wrong.

2. Deputy Atty. General Raymond M. Mombosse, who will testify on the legal responsibilities of county and city officials with regard to detention facilities and prisoners.

3. Walter Dunbar, director of the state department of corrections, who is to testify on "minimum jail standards and the need for compliance thereto."

4. Deputy State Fire Marshal Leon Baldwin of Seaside, who will testify on fire hazards existing in local jail facilities. Baldwin inspected the Monterey county jail in 1959 and again last year and found it full of fire hazards both times. An affidavit from him labeling the jail a fire hazard was included in Nielsen's petition for a writ of habeas corpus.

5. Joseph R. Dieffenbacher, who will show photographs he took in various jail inspections he made for the Assembly subcommittee on custodial institutions. Dieffenbacher accompanied Kilpatrick in his inspection of the Monterey county jail last summer. Kilpatrick said the jail was "filthy."

6. Phillip Hay Condit, M.D., chief of the bureau of communicable diseases for the state department of public health. He will testify on minimum health standards to prevent the spread of communicable diseases in detention facilities.

Monterey County Gets Jail Support

Officials Say Local Rule First

By Eric Brazil

SACRAMENTO—Monterey county received support from two sources today in its running battle with the state of California over the issue of State vs. Local control of jails.

Some 120 county and state officials attended this morning's opening hearing of the Assembly subcommittee on custodial institutions dealing with jail conditions in Monterey, Madera, Merced, Del Norte and Sacramento counties.

Local Responsibility

Both state department of corrections director Walter Dunbar and Deputy Atty. Gen. Raymond M. Momboisse stressed in testimony before the subcommittee that the first line of responsibility for the construction and maintenance of jails is local.

The promise of future fireworks in the hearing, which is scheduled to last two days, was offered by Subcommittee Chairman Vernon Kilpatrick who turned the chair over to a colleague in order to introduce sworn testimony into the records.

Assemblyman John A. O'Donnell (D.-San Francisco) held the chair today as Kilpatrick read several rather uncomplimentary headlines from Monterey county newspapers.

Monterey County delegation to the hearing was still waiting in the wings to testify at the hearing.

State Sen. Fred S. Farr, Monterey County Supervisor Tom Hudson, Undersheriff Carol Joy, County Health Officer Dr. Myron Husband, County Sanitation Director Ed Munson, Jailer Lt. D. A. McIntyre and Carmel Atty. James R. Nielsen are expected to testify before the hearing ends.

Dunbar told the committee See JAIL -over Page 2

partment; Tom Hudson, chairman of the Board of Supervisors; Under-sheriff C. F. Joy; and Sheriff's Lt. D. J. McIntyre.

Legislator, Tom Hudson Clash on Jail

SACRAMENTO — Assemblyman Vernon Kilpatrick (D-Lynwood), and Monterey County Supervisor Tom Hudson exchanged hot words Monday at a subcommittee hearing on jail conditions.

"Monterey County is not going to be bullwhipped into anything," said Hudson, angry because Kilpatrick as chairman of the Assembly subcommittee on jails had issued subpoenas to Monterey County officials.

"Does that mean that you will not comply with the laws of California?" asked Kilpatrick.

"We will comply and have complied. We would have been more than happy to attend this hearing without subpoenas," said Hudson.

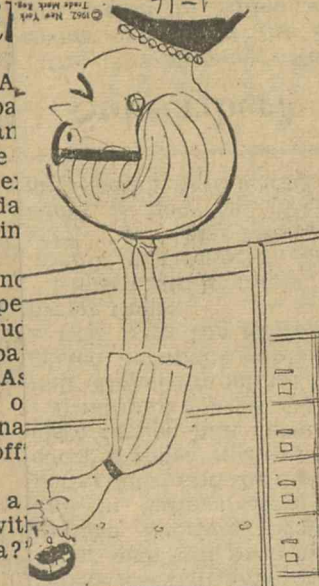

Joseph R. Dieffenbacher who inspected the Monterey County Jail in Salinas for the subcommittee last August, said he found it dirty and overcrowded.

Deputy State Fire Marshal Leon Baldwin said he recommended in 1959 that certain fire hazards in the jail be corrected, but no action was taken until last month, after Dieffenbacher's inspection and a court action by a prisoner in the jail.

Hudson testified that he hadn't seen Baldwin's rec-low up on Tom's request," he said. "It's time we stood upon our hind legs and fought this."

Other supervisors agreed but added that it would be better to question Hudson on his return from Sacramento before taking action.

"I don't think any of us want to drop this," Board Chairman Burt Talcott of Salinas said. "We're just trying to decide whether to act now or when Tom comes back."

Talcott struck hard at what he termed "state interference."

"There seems to be more than a pattern," he said.

"There may even be a conspiracy to broaden state controls over Monterey County."

Talcott reminded other supervisors of the recent fight they had with officials of the State Department of Social Welfare.

"I think we've won every one of these battles," Supervisor Chester Deaver of Prunedale said, "and we are going to continue to win them as long as we have good, conservation local government."

Supervisors action delaying issuing a subpoena means it will probably be after the coming budget session on the State Legislature before any action can be taken.

Hudson Lashes At Jail Critics

By EVERETT MESICK

SACRAMENTO—Peninsula Supervisor Tom Hudson today lashed back at an assembly subcommittee that had criticized the Monterey County jail.

He termed the critical report made last summer by a subcommittee investigator, Joseph R. Dieffenbacher, "slanted and deliberately untrue," and accused the unit's chairman, Vernon Kilpatrick, a Lynwood Democrat, of being motivated by a desire for headlines.

The Monterey delegation headed by Hudson opened the second day of hearings on county jail conditions by the subcommittee on custodial institutions. Called to the microphone to back up Hudson were County Health Officer Myron Husband, Undersheriff Carol F. Joy, Chief Jailor Dave McIntyre and Chief Sanitarian officer Ed Munson. Hudson carried most of the burden of testimony, calling only occasionally on the others for information.

In testimony yesterday, Hudson told Kilpatrick that "Monterey County will not be bullwhipped into anything." He said he would have been glad to attend the hearing without a subpoena.

Also testifying yesterday were State Sen. Fred Farr (D-Carmel), Carmel attorney James R. Nielsen, Deputy State Fire Marshal Leon Baldwin of Seaside and Dieffenbacher.

Hudson reviewed in his testimony this morning the reports of Monterey County grand juries from 1956 through 1961, in which the jail was given a high cleanliness rating.

He quoted from a letter from the State Department of Corrections dated March 4, 1958, in which the jail was complimented. Hudson asked Kilpatrick if he had received a copy of the letter. Kilpatrick said he had.

In reply to Kilpatrick's charge that the federal government had approved the jail only for overnight custody of its prisoners, Hudson introduced into evidence reports from federal courts in which two prisoners were sentenced to 30 days in the local facility.

Referring to the Dieffenbacher report, which called the jail dirty, Hudson said, "This is just about as absurd a document as I have ever seen." He admitted, however, that there was a attention of the board of supervisors until a writ of habeas corpus was filed last month by Nielsen, calling the jail a fire trap.

After telling Subcommittee Chairman Vernon Kilpatrick that Monterey County "will not be bullwhipped," "some truth" in it brought about by population growth and its resultant overcrowding effect on the jail.

Hudson said county employees used the jail kitchen to prepare food for their annual barbecue to refute Dieffenbacher's claim that the kitchen was an unfit place in which to cook.

He extended an invitation, which he emphasized involved no subpoenas, to the committee to come to Monterey County and visit the jail. He told the committee that Assemblyman Alan Pattee had visited the jail the day after Kilpatrick and found it clean. To Kilpatrick's question whether any cleaning had been done between the two visits, Hudson said, "No." He added, "You can come through my house after three children and two dogs have been through it and find something wrong."

Remodeling Jail Denied

Hudson said the county will comply with laws governing its jail.

State Sen. Fred Farr of Carmel gave general testimony on his investigation as chairman of a Senate Committee on Correctional Facilities from 1957 to 1959. He said he had found local jails overcrowded, evidences of fire hazards, many cases of tuberculosis among inmates and bond issues for new jails failing.

Need Local Support

Farr suggested that the counties will "fall into line in time," adding that "they want to improve their jails but may not have local support."

Also present from Monterey County were Mrs. Paul McReynolds, a Del Monte Park housewife credited with sparking the hearing; Sgt. John Johansen, former sheriff's deputy fired in a jail controversy, and County Administrator Walter Mansfield.

Talcott Wonders if State Conspires to Control County

Echoing the voice of Supervisor Tom Hudson of Monterey, that the county "will not be bullwhipped into anything," the county board Monday made it plain that they want Vernon Kilpatrick, the state assemblyman who has led criticism of the county jail, to appear before them soon.

Burt Talcott, newly-seated chairman of the board, hit hard at state interference. "There may be a conspiracy to broaden state controls over Monterey County," suggested the Salinas supervisor, alluding to the recent difficulties with the state over the county's welfare policies.

"It's time we stood on our hind legs and fought this," said Supervisor Harold Henry of King City in reference to having Assemblyman Kilpatrick appear before the board to answer questions on the jail criticism.

KILPATRICK opened Assembly subcommittee hearings in Sacramento Monday, as part of an investigation into conditions at the jail. He opened his investigation of the jail with a surprise inspection of it last summer.

Subsequently he subpoenaed several county officials, including Hudson, former board chairman, to appear before his subcommittee.

Hudson retaliated by asking for a subpoena requiring Kilpatrick's presence before the board of supervisors.

While supervisors discussed the matter in Salinas, Hudson was representing the county at the hearing in Sacramento. He was challenged by Kilpatrick, who asked if the county of Monterey "will not comply with the laws of California."

"WE WILL comply and have complied. We would have been more than happy to attend this hearing without subpoenas," said Hudson.

Joseph R. Dieffenbacher, who inspected the Monterey County Jail in Salinas for the subcommittee last August, said he found it dirty and overcrowded.

Deputy State Fire Marshal Leon Baldwin said he recommended in 1959 that certain fire hazards in the jail be corrected, but no action was taken until last month, after Dieffenbacher's inspection and a court action by a prisoner in the jail.

HUDSON TESTIFIED that he hadn't seen Baldwin's recommendations for two years, until the subcommittee's investigation and the court case brought the matter up.

He said Baldwin's letter had been referred by the county administrator to the architect who was working on plans for a renovation of the jail.

Supervisors action delaying issuing a subpoena for Kilpatrick until they can discuss the hearing with Hudson probably means delay. It will be after the coming budget session of the state legislature before any action can be taken.

Supervisors Okay County Jail Plans

SALINAS—The board of supervisors today approved preliminary plans for the $375,000 remodeling and enlargement of the county jail.

The architect was told to draw up final plans and Peninsula Supervisor Tom Hudson succeeded in obtaining a stipulation for advance approval by federal and state governments.

County Administrator Walter Mansfield said earlier that work will get under way this fiscal year.

The discussion was accompanied by broadsides at jail critics by Chairman Burt Talcott and Mansfield.

"We must do our best and overlook criticism," Talcott said, adding that "people who criticize the jail knew what we were doing."

View Plans

He said the board will welcome any constructive criticism and that the clerk will have jail plans on hand for anybody to view.

Mansfield accepted full responsibility for the tardiness of action on fire marshal recommendations made two years ago, explaining that proper procedure on remodeling would call for incorporation in the major project now contemplated.

"I've looked at a lot of jails and ours is a lot better than many," Mansfield said. He added that "it's doubtful that anybody could even set a fire over there."

He referred to the recent attempt by Carmel attorney James Nielsen to release second floor prisoners on grounds the jail was a fire hazard. Mansfield said that the state fire marshal and the State Department of Corrections recently gave informal approval to the remodeling plans and indicated that they would okay the final plans.

Included in the plans are a new kitchen, new boiler room and installation of facilities on the present third and fourth floor shell to relieve crowded conditions elsewhere in the jail.

County Opens Counterattack

SALINAS, CALIFORNIAN 1/27/62

By Eric Brazil

(See Related Stories Page 14)

SACRAMENTO—Monterey county carried a vigorous defense of its jail to the Assembly subcommittee on custodial institutions today.

It even did some counterattacking on its own.

Supervisor Tom Hudson of the Monterey Peninsula asked the committee not to accept a report on an inspection of the jail made by Assemblyman Vernon Kilpatrick (D-Linwood) until it had a chance to see the jail for itself.

Cordial Invitation

"We won't subpoena you," Hudson said, "we extend a cordial invitation." Hudson charged the committee was misusing its own power of subpoena. "It was the first time in the history of the state that subpoenas have been so recklessly used."

Hudson charged that Kilpatrick's report is "deliberately slanted and basically untrue. It was done to satisfy Mr. Kilpatrick's desire for headlines. And, believe me, his approaches hinder our work on the jail and will have lasting effects on the relationship of Monterey county to the state."

'Absurd' Statement

"It was just about as absurd a document as I've ever seen," he said. "It would give credit to a Hollywood script writer."

"If that report is false, will you please specify how," Kilpatrick said.

Hudson then read a great volume of material into the record including Monterey County grand jury reports from 1954 to 1961, jail menus and reports from the state fire marshal and the state board of corrections.

At one point Acting Chairman John O'Connell (D-San Francisco) tried to keep Hudson from reading so much material but Hudson declined to do so, saying it was "important."

County Sanitarian Ed Munson detailed some of the errors in the report on the jail's kitchen. Kilpatrick's investigator Joseph R. Dieffenbacher had reported that the kitchen was an unfit place for serving food.

Kitchen Clean

"The kitchen may not be adequate in some respects," Munson said, "but it's clean and I know it has been for the last 10 years. For example, we serve three-quarters of a million meals there in that time without a single case of food poisoning. If your kitchen is dirty you can't avoid that." Munson also testified that severe deficiencies noted in other inspections of the jail had been corrected and that some of them were in the process of being fixed when the Kilpatrick inspection occurred.

Monterey county officials did all the testifying at this morning's session. With Hudson and Munson on the witness stand were Undersheriff Carol F. Joy, Dr. Myron Husband, county health officer and Chief Jailer Deputy Sheriff D. J. McIntyre.

Cites Prison Murder

Directing himself to the committee as a whole, Hudson said that "in the past five weeks you have five murders in San Quentin and an active dope ring there. Now, all government agencies have problems and all we expect from you is that you try to understand ours. Remember, Monterey county carries a heavy load of Soledad prisoners in its jail."

"Talk about a crash program. The one the state is involved in now, moving all those prisoners out of San Quentin, is really a crash program that's going to cost the people plenty."

Early in the hearing after Hudson had described Monterey county's long-range plan for capital construction, Kilpatrick asked, "What is the bonded indebtedness of the county now?"

None Countywide

Hudson said that there is no countywide bonded indebtedness but that certain supervisorial districts have bonded indebtedness of their own.

He explained that he personally has tried to avoid any small bond issues because the county may have to float a big one to vote a third courthouse on the Monterey peninsula. "We try to pay as we go," he said.

"I have it straight from the highest authorities that federal prisoners can only be kept in the Monterey county jail overnight. Is that correct?" Kilpatrick asked.

"No," Hudson said, and cited two recent 30-day sentences served by federal prisoners in Monterey county.

"I got this information straight from the chief marshal, for all of Northern California," Kilpatrick said.

"He's mistaken," Hudson said.

Subcommittee consultant, Mrs. Pamela Thompson, asked Undersheriff Joy if it were true that alcoholics in the jail could only be visited by representatives of Alcoholics Anonymous if they were trustees.

Joy Denies Charge

"No, that isn't true at all," Joy said.

Campbell Gets New Court Post

Monterey Municipal Judge Gordon Campbell today was appointed as judge of Monterey County's third superior court by Gov. Edmund G. Brown.

The 51-year-old Campbell, a 25-year-veteran of the State Bar, a one-time star athlete and a man who has lived practically his entire life in Carmel, will be sworn into office either late this week or early next week.

His appointment does not come as a surprise. He had been endorsed for the position by State Sen. Fred Farr (D-Carmel) and the County Bar Assn. Campbell is a Democrat and a personal friend of State Chief Justice Phil S. Gibson.

The only other Monterey County attorney to formally apply for the new judgeship, officially created on Jan. 1, was Salinas Mayor Arthur Atteridge.

Acting Judge

Judge Campbell has been a municipal judge of the Monterey - Carmel Judicial District since Sept. 1959. For about six months of his tenure as municipal judge, Judge Campbell has served as an acting superior judge in Monterey and San Luis Obispo Counties.

As a superior judge, he will receive a yearly salary of $21,000. His present salary as a municipal judge is $16,800.

Judge Campbell's elevation to the superior bench means that several attorneys will be vying for the municipal court vacancy. One of the applicants is expected to be District Atty. Edward K. Barnes.

Barnes said late last week that he would seek the municipal judgeship if Campbell were appointed to the superior bench.

Other Candidates

Other reported candidates for the municipal court opening include Monterey City Atty. Russell Zaches, Miss Patricia Lane, San City City Atty. Milton Thompson, Saul M. Weingarten, William K. Stewart and Eugene Harrah.

Barnes and Harrah are

Republicans, the others Democrats.

Upon receiving his commission as superior judge this morning, Judge Campbell said:

"I am very pleased with, and complimented by, the appointment. It will be a satisfying experience for me to work in association with Judge Brazil and Judge Lawson and the highly-efficient staff of the Superior Court.

"My work as municipal judge has been stimulating and enjoyable. I must confess that I shall miss the very pleasant personal contacts I have had with the fine personnel in the municipal court and with my good friend, Ray Baugh."

Judge Campbell will have to stand election for his new office in June. The term will be for six years. He may, of course, have opposition but Campbell said that he is prepared to wage a campaign if it should be necessary.

No Facilities

As yet, there are no facilities for the new court in Salinas. Judge Campbell said that he will, at least for the initial period of operation of the new court, switch about from one courtroom to the other in Salinas.

He said that he does not intend to exert any personal pressure for a new courthouse in Monterey. Sessions of superior court have been authorized for Monterey and are held in Monterey every Friday afternoon in the Monterey Council Chambers. Plans for a new Monterey courthouse annex, including a superior courtroom, have been on the drawing board for many years but nothing has been done in recent years to activate them.

Judge Campbell's appointment again raised questions as to the possibility of Judge Baugh's retirement. Last spring, Judge Baugh expressed an intent to retire before the end of the year. Subsequently, he changed his mind and as of this morning, said he still has no idea of exactly when he might retire.

Asked if he might be waiting to see who is appointed to the vacancy created by Judge Campbell's elevation, Judge Baugh said, "That will have considerable bearing on what I do."

Judge Baugh still has three years to run on his current term. Asked if there were any possibility that he might serve out his term, Judge Baugh said "I don't want to."

Judge Baugh has been a judge in Monterey for more than 35 years.

Promoted

Municipal Judge Gordon Campbell today was elevated to the superior court bench in Monterey County. His appointment was announced by Gov. Brown.

Third Generation Lawyer

Monterey County's new superior judge, Gordon Campbell, is a third generation lawyer who has lived most of his life in Carmel.

Born Aug. 30, 1910, in San Jose, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Argyll Campbell, Judge Campbell moved with his family to Carmel in 1914 and this has been his home since.

His father died in 1943 while his mother still lives took post graduate law at the Georgetown University Law School in Washington.

In 1938, he was elected to the Carmel City Council along with Bert Herron and Fred Bechdoldt. He served only a few months, resigning to become United States Marshal for China. His commission was signed by President Franklin D. Roosevelt and was confirmed by the U.S. Senate.

While serving in China, he also filled a post as professor of law in crimes and torts at Soochow University Law School.

Deputy DA

He returned home in 1940 and served as deputy district attorney in Monterey County from 1940-43 and 1946-48. During World War II, he was a naval officer.

Throughout the years, until his appointment to the municipal bench, he maintained private law offices in the Professional Building in Monterey.

He served 10 years as a member of the board of trustees of the Carmel Unified

UNICEF

Editor, The Herald:

Recently in The Herald, Mr. Thomas Mathews rather vehemently criticized UNICEF, the United Nations children's fund, as being promotive of a world-wide welfare state and as somehow undermining our heritage of constitutional freedoms. I think such statements to be unwarranted and inaccurate.

UNICEF is today the world's largest international agency devoting itself exclusively to the welfare of children and has brought hope into the lives of millions of people in remote parts of the world in a way no other international enterprise has done. Of the one billion children in the world, about 750 million live in underdeveloped areas. Eighty per cent of these children live in countries where the average per capita income is less than $100 a year. Most of these children face a short, sick and hungry life.

The purpose of UNICEF is to give the children of these parts of the world a chance for a more healthy, productive and happy life. UNICEF's main contribution has been to reduce the incidence of crippling diseases and the number of premature births.

UNICEF makes no assessments, but depends entirely on voluntary contributions from governments, private organizations, and individuals. Its total yearly income of $20 million plus is contributed by some 87 governments.

Rather than endangering our American ideals of freedom, I feel that UNICEF in its small way is helping to counteract the appeal of communism. Communism's appeal is strongest in those societies where poverty, misery, and disease are the predominant condition of living; it is to these suffering people that communism makes its claim to be the only alternative for a better life. To combat this challenge, the free nations of the world must offer better alternative towards a more hopeful future for the young people of the world. I think UNICEF helps in a large measure to meet this challenge.

What's Your Opinion?

Primaries

Editor, The Herald:

The self-appointed leader of Monterey County Democrats Mr. William Stewart, should study both political science and the history of the Democratic party in California before he takes his role of kingmaker. He seems to forget the sole purpose of the primary election is to give the voter a selection of candidates within his party. If a single candidate were to be selected by each party, there would be no reason for the primary.

The California Democratic Council was formed to make endorsements of candidates or slates of candidates because of cross-filing. In the interest of more responsible party leadership, such groups as the League of Women Voters worked for the abolition of cross-filing. Since that time there has been no reason for pre-election endorsements. Unfortunately the CDC has not yet realized this. The voters in both parties are well able to make their own decisions.

Mr. Stewart's weakness in history is apparent in his statement that the CDC and the Monterey Peninsula Democratic Club "made Fred Farr". Mr. Farr was one of the state leaders of the Democratic party who organized the CDC at Asilomar before Mr. Stewart was heard of in Monterey County Democratic politics.

In the interest of good representative government all candidates should be encouraged to run for office. Qualified citizens should not be discouraged by any group attempting to force its philosophy on a candidate or party.

What's Your

UNICEF

Editor, The Herald:

Sen. Farr's letter summarized well the UNICEF propaganda line publicized in brochure, pamphlet and news releases of the U.S. Committee for UNICEF.

The last paragraph of the senator's letter contains a statement first thought up by the Truman administration to wring money out of a reluctant Congress and eagerly adopted by Eisenhower for the same purpose, that "communism's appeal is strongest in those societies where poverty, misery, and disease are the predominate conditions of living."

This statement contains so little truth that it is no longer useful as an argument and I am surprised that the senator still believes it.

40 Peninsula Delegates

State Demos Meet Friday

By EARL HOFELDT

Approximately 40 Monterey Peninsula Democrats are slated to attend the annual convention of the California Democratic Council Friday through Sunday in Fresno.

Total state-wide attendance at the convention is expected to top 6,000.

In addition to the Fresno trip, about seven Peninsulans are expected to go to San Francisco tomorrow night to hear Gov. Edmund G. Brown formally announce his 1962 plans at a $100-a-plate dinner at the Fairmont Hotel.

Virtually everyone expects Brown to declare himself a candidate for re-election.

His declaration will add thrust to the Democratic convention in Fresno. The convention, in turn, is intended to serve as a campaign springboard for the re-election of Brown and other Democratic constitutional officers.

The CDC, representing more than 600 California clubs, makes pre-primary endorsements. That is, it will give its blessing to certain Democratic candidates in the June 5 primary at the expense of other Democrats who might want the same jobs.

In the last 10 years, the CDC has shown a lot of muscle and in many areas has more strength than official state and county central committees which, as a rule, do not enter the area of pre-primary endorsements.

In Fresno, most of the endorsement tasks should be simple. The organization probably will give automatic backing to Brown, Lt. Gov. Glenn M. Anderson, Atty. Gen. Stanley Mock, Controller Alan Cranston and Treasurer Bert Betts.

There may be some argument over endorsement of State Sen. Richard Richards (D-Los Angeles) for the U.S. Senate seat now held by Republican Thomas H. Kuchel. Richards was beaten by Kuchel in 1956, but at this moment Richards looks much stronger than any other Democrat who might make the race.

Debate Due

Another endorsement that may spur debate is for the position of secretary of state. A likely Democratic candidate is Don Rose, chairman of the Los Angeles County Democratic Central Committee. The job now is held by Frank B. Jordan, the only Republican to retain his statehouse post in the 1958 Democratic landslide.

If CDC delegates do not fuss over endorsements, some battles may arise over resolutions. For many years, there has been a great deal of internal war within the CDC between party "liberals" and "moderates." Resolutions dealing with such topics as UN admission of Red China, the House Un-American Activities Committee and various civil rights question have fomented many verbal brawls in past years.

The Republican counterpart of the CDC, the Republican Assembly, will hold its endorsing convention in Berkeley on March 2-4. About 30 Monterey County Republicans are expected to attend.

14 Delegates

The Peninsula will be represented at the Fresno meeting by 14 representatives of the Carmel Women's Democratic Club, 10 from the Salinas-Alisal Democratic Club; 3 from the Salinas-Alisal Women's Democratic Club; 3 from the Seaside Democratic Club and 10 from the Monterey Democratic Club.

Farr Protests Tidelands Road

A protest against a proposed new county road across the tidelands of the western shore of Bodega Harbor has been lodged by State Sen. Fred S. Farr (D-Carmel).

In a letter to Col. John Thompson of the Army Corps of Engineers in San Francisco, Farr urged reconsideration of the new route, which is being planned to serve an atomic power plant to be constructed by Pacific Gas and Electric Co. on Bodega Head in Sonoma County.

"... This proposed road would endanger the natural habitat of many marine animals and plants ... in an unsurpassed area for scientific research ..." Farr's letter says. "The national interest, I think, requires that such rare areas for marine research be zealously protected ..."

Farr suggests that the present county road would serve the same purpose by widening and extension.

NEWS Comments

Their Wrath Can Be Terrible . . .

There has been some concern on the Monterey Peninsula over rumblings from Sacramento that the state may crack down on potluck dinners, church suppers and similar gastronomic events.

A Seaside lady, who wishes to be known only as "A Methodist," has written us an indignant letter asking us whether the State of California is worried over people of other faiths getting indigestion from eating Methodist food.

We understand that Sen. Fred Farr likewise has had some inquiries on the subject. He said recently that the matter is now under consideration by the attorney general's office and that a ruling is expected shortly.

It seems that the State Restaurant Act prohibits the sale of meals which are cooked in homes, or without the usual sanitary requirements imposed on restaurants.

It has been held that church or other organizations may serve meals for money to their own members without violating this law. The question at issue is whether they may serve non-members.

Many church and other organizations do this to raise money. If the attorney general should rule this unlawful and if the law is enforced, this practice would be stopped.

Our guess is that there is nothing to worry about.

We believe Atty. Gen. Mosk is far too smart a politician to antagonize all the Methodist, Presbyterian, Baptist, Catholic and other church ladies who are doing this, not to mention the Daughters of Pocahontas.

These ladies have a lot of votes and when offended in matters such as church suppers their wrath can be terrible.

Besides, the Democratic party raises a lot of money through potluck dinners. And we have a Democratic administration in Sacramento.

Church suppers and potluck dinners are well established institutions in this country, tested by time. We have never known anyone to be poisoned at one of them. On the contrary, the food is invariably wholesome.

Cracking down on them would be bad strategy for any administration.

Farr Explains Pot Luck Rules

In response to a number of queries concerning the law regulating pot luck dinners in California, Senator Fred S. Farr (D-Carmel) has contacted the Office of the Legislative Counsel and the State Department of Public Health for their opinions.

Pot luck dinners, it is reported, are not prohibited by law when the food is served to the members of the club or organization serving the food.

However, the California Restaurant Act, among other things, prohibits the sale, offer for sale, or giving away of food prepared in a private home, in a restaurant or itinerant restaurant. The Department of Public Health has interpreted "restaurant" and "itinerant restaurant" to include all food served, pot luck or otherwise, when served to other than members of the club or organization serving the food. Under this analysis, a community organization or club might be considered a restaurant or itinerant restaurant and subject to the California Restaurant Act if it serves food to the public, guests, patrons or employees of the organization.

The definitive opinion on this subject is now under consideration in the Office of the Attorney General, and an official ruling is expected soon. This opinion, Senator Farr said, could have considerable impact on church groups, PTA's, Boy Scouts and other community groups which hold food sales of various kinds in order to raise funds for their activities.

Stevenson Clan Gathers

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif., Feb. 16 (UPI)—A bridal dinner attended by about 70 socially elite friends and relatives honored John Fell Stevenson and Natalie Raymond Owings tonight on the eve of their marriage.

Stevenson, 25, is the son of U. S. Ambassador to the United Nations Adlai E. Stevenson and Mrs. Borden Stevenson of Chicago. Miss Owings, 22, an artist and designer, is the daughter of internationally known architect Nathaniel Alexander Owings of San Francisco and Big Sur, Calif., and Mrs. John S. Barnes of Albuquerque, N. M.

They will be married at 3 P. M. Saturday at "Wild Bird," the seaside Big Sur home of Mr. and Mrs. Owings. The ceremony will be performed by Dr. Peter Farmer of All Saints Episcopal Church, Carmel, with only members of the families as guests.

A reception for about 300 guests will follow at Nepenthe, a restaurant on the scenic coast south of Carmel.

The Ambassador said on arrival in San Francisco by plane that the marriage would be "the happiest alliance between East and West that has taken place in quite a while," with his son representing the East and Miss Owings the West.

Hosts at the bridal dinner, a black tie affair at the beach club of Del Monte Lodge, were Mrs. Borden Stevenson and Ambassador Stevenson. It was preceded by a buffet luncheon, with substantially the same guest list, at the Pebble Beach home of Mr. and Mrs. John Boit Morse.

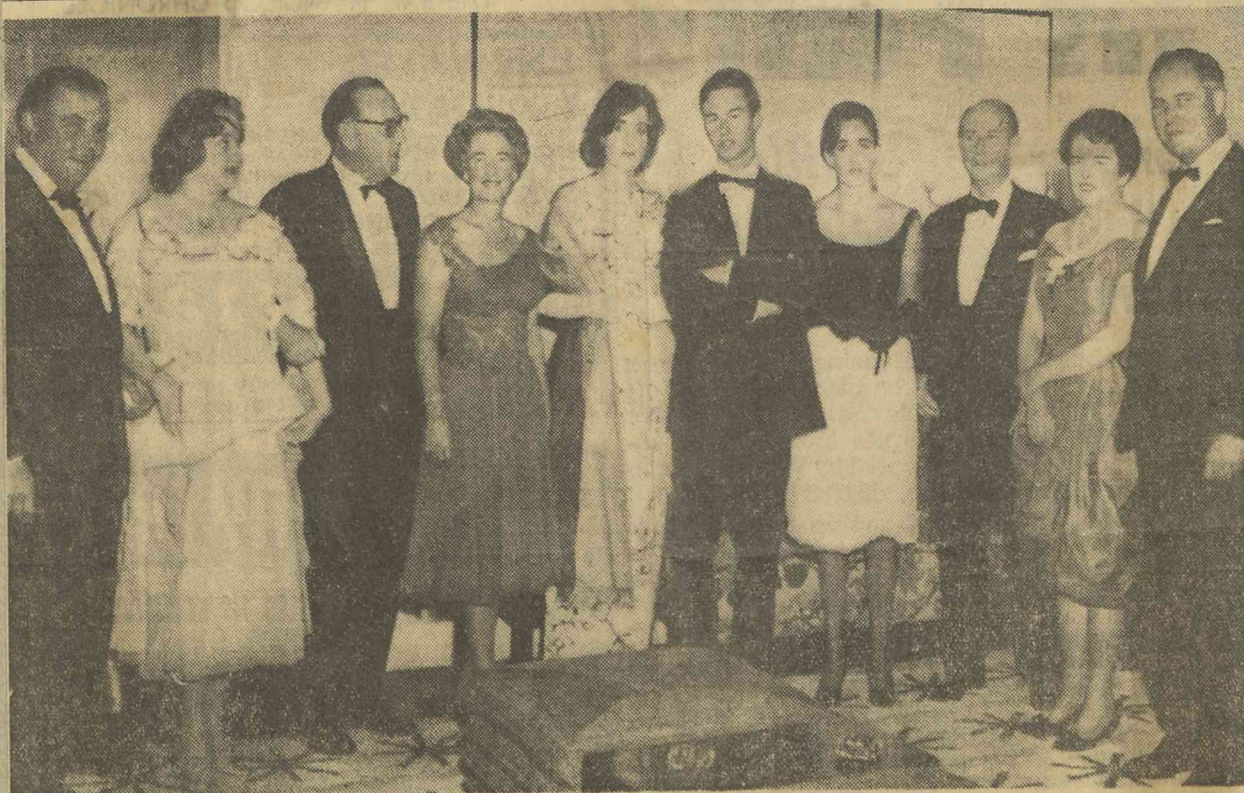

Dinner guests included Gov. and Mrs. Edmund G. Brown of California, Mr.

Nathaniel Alexander Owings, architect, and his wife, Patricia Ewert, Lois Hobbs, and for snowy Switzerland, tickets before leaving.

SAN FRANCISCO CHRONICLE, Saturday, February 17, 1962

Ambassador Adlai Stevenson and his former wife, Mrs. Borden Stevenson gave a dinner last night at Pebble Beach on the eve of their son John's wedding to Natalie Owings. Those present (from left): Na-

Special to the News-Call Bulletin

BIG SUR, Feb. 17—Adlai Stevenson, U. S. ambassador to the United Nations, was here today for a general assembly of sorts.

But he put aside affairs of state as he gathered with family and friends for the afternoon wedding of his son, John Fell Stevenson, 25, and Natalie Raymond Owings, 22.

ASKED TO perform the ceremony at the home of the bride's father, architect Nathaniel Owings, was Dr. Peter Farmer of All Saints Episcopal Church in Carmel.

Young Stevenson, now in the real estate business in San Francisco, asked his father to be best man, with his two brothers, Adlai E. Stevenson III and Borden Stevenson, as ushers.

The bride's twin sister, Emily (Kim) Owings, was named maid of honor, with Jananne Lassetter and Jacqueline Merrill, both of San Francisco, as bridesmaids.

The newlyweds will live in San Francisco after a honeymoon in South America.

THEY WERE honored last night at a bridal dinner attended by about 70 socially elite friends and relatives. Gov. and Mrs. Brown were among the guests.

The black-tie dinner, at Del Monte Lodge, was hosted by the former presidential candidate and his ex-wife, Mrs. Ellen Borden Stevenson of Chicago.

The dinner was preceded by a buffet lunch at the Pebble Beach home of Mr. and Mrs. John Boit Morse.

Stevenson, arriving at San Francisco International Airport yesterday, called the marriage "the happiest alliance between East and West that has taken place in quite a while," with his son representing the East and Miss Owings the West.

WHEN A REPORTER facetiously remarked, "You seem to be well-shod, Mr. Ambassador," Stevenson quipped back, "Oh, I had those fixed."

While he has long since discarded the shoes in which he wore holes while campaigning for the presidency, he conceded he could use some attention from a barber.

Then, after a look at his obviously excited son, he added with a laugh:

"I think he and I will both celebrate tomorrow's event by getting haircuts."

Yes, he replied to another question, he's "very well acquainted, and very well pleased," with Natalie. She and John have been neighbors in recent years on Telegraph Hill.

Adlai took time out, as social amenities permitted, to discuss some of the international events confronting him, in his ambassadorial role, the United States, and the United Nations.

Among other things, he said he was "not hopeful in the least" that the appointment this week of Carlos Rafael Rodriguez to succeed Fidel Castro as head of Cuba's National Land Reform Institute would change the course of events in that country.

"I look upon it as a further expansion of Communist control there," he said.

ASKED ABOUT claims of rightist groups that the UN is losing its role in world affairs, Stevenson said a recent Gallup Poll showed, on the contrary, it is enjoying "its highest degree of popularity since its inception."

"Personally," he added, "I feel that if we got out of this one we'd have to immediately get into another."

"Such an organization is the only hope of small states that they can defend themselves and restrain extremists among world powers."

Stevenson predicted this country would take a "very firm stand" against Soviet harassment of Allied air traffic along the corridors to Berlin, "although at this time I can't say what specific steps may be taken."

Girl of Year Here Tomorrow

Wedding Day Near For John, Natalie

By EVELYN LONDAHL

The bride and groom may get lost in the shuffle of VIP's, but they couldn't be more pleased.

John Fell Stevenson and Natalie Raymond Owings, just as any young couple in love, are rosily adrift in their own thoughts and plans while everybody but the FBI — and probably a few of those secure gentlemen, too — draws up the blueprint for John and Natalie's wedding in Big Sur on Saturday.

The son of United Nations Ambassador Adlai Stevenson and the daughter of distinguished architect Nathaniel Alexander Owings will be married at 3 o'clock Saturday afternoon in the living room of the Owings' home in Big Sur.

Emily will be her sister's maid of honor and the bridesmaids are to be Misses Jananne Lassetter and Jacqueline Merrill, both of San Francisco. Ushers will be Adlai E. Stevenson III of Chicago and Borden Stevenson of New York, brothers of John. Dr. Peter Farmer of All Saints Episcopal Church, Carmel, will officiate at the wedding.

Family Wedding

It will be "family only" at the wedding ceremony, but the reception is a different story. So is the "black tie" bridal dinner for 60 guests that Mrs. Borden Stevenson and Ambassador Stevenson will give Friday night at the Beach Club in Pebble Beach. California's governor, the Hon. Edmund G. Brown, and Mrs. Brown have accepted an invitation to the dinner. So have Dr. and Mrs. Robert Maynard Hutchins and Miss Barbara Hutchins of Chicago and Santa Barbara, and State Sen. and Mrs. Fred Farr of Carmel.

Arrives Tomorrow

Ambassador Stevenson arrives on the Monterey Peninsula tomorrow to serve as his son's best man. He will stay at Del Monte Lodge, where 11 rooms have been reserved for some of the guests among the 300 attending the wedding reception at Nepenthe.

An entire motel in Big Sur has been taken over for some of the other guests. John's mother, Mrs. Borden Stevenson of Chicago, and his maternal grandmother, Mrs. John Alden Carpenter of Beverley, Mass., and Chicago, will be guests at Rancho Rico, the G. C. Wolterding ranch at Big Sur. Natalie's mother, Mrs. John S. Barnes of Albuquerque, N. M., and her twin sister, Miss Emily (Kim) Owings of San Francisco, will be guests at the Wolterding ranch also.

Dean and Mrs. Carl Spaeth of Stanford and Mr. and Mrs. Ansel Adams of San Francisco have received and accepted, coveted invitations to the reception, as have Mr. and Mrs. William S. Ames and Mr. and Mrs. Edison Dick of Chicago, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Chisholm of Burlingame and the Henry Colbys of Berkeley, to name a few.

The Monterey Peninsula will be represented at the reception by the Fred Farris, Mr. and Mrs. Martin Flavin, Mr. and Mrs. S. F. B. Morse, Mr. and Mrs. John Boit Morse, Mr. and Mrs. Allen Griffin, of Pebble Beach, Mr. and Mrs. James van Loben Sels of Carmel, G. C. Wolterding, Mr. and Mrs. William Chenery, Mrs. Alan Gregg, Mrs. Valentine Porter and Harrydick Ross, all of Big Sur.

Sometime during the festivities at Nepenthe, John and Natalie will take their departure, embarking on a wedding trip to South America. They will live in San Francisco, where John is in the real estate development field and Natalie works as an artist and designer.

January 25, 1962

My dear Fred:

I am so grateful to you for your letter of January 11, and for your invitation to be your guest at the Old Capital Club in Monterey.

I saw Nat Owings here in New York last night and told him about your kindness. He was most grateful too, but explained to me that he had already made arrangements to put up my family.

I hope that I will have an opportunity to see you at the reception following the wedding. But I am afraid I dare not attempt to get to the Army Language School. In the first place, I won't be able to get there until Friday afternoon, and then I suspect I shall have to return on Sunday. We have a session of the General Assembly currently sitting in New York and I dare not be away too long.

With warmest good wishes,

Cordially yours,

Dear Senator Farr:

On January 31 the Outdoor Recreation Resources Review Commission, headed by Laurance Rockefeller, will submit to the President and the Congress its monumental report on conservation and outdoor recreation. As you may know, this Department is planning a legislative program in response to this report. We are hopeful that we can design a new program which will be truly national in scope and which will galvanize action by state and local officials as well as initiate new national programs.

Conservationwise, the State of California has in recent years been a leader in providing creative new answers to the various conservation problems which confront the people of California. I am informed that in the State Legislature you have been the outstanding proponent of new conservation measures and I am most anxious at this stage to discuss some of the facets of our new program with a few leaders who have demonstrated a special insight into conservation problems. I have already conferred at length with Governor Gaylord Nelson, of Wisconsin, and I am most anxious to have a conference with you in the near future.

On the assumption that as a State official you would be willing to serve in an advisory capacity without compensation, my Department would be willing to reimburse you for travel expenses in making a quick trip to Washington. I do hope you will accept this invitation and that we will have an opportunity to confer in the near future.

Sincerely,

Farr, Udall Conference Is Scheduled ✓

State Sen. Fred Farr (D-Carmel) has been asked by U. S. Interior Secretary Stewart Udall to meet with his staff in Washington, D. C. on conservation programs.

Farr, who leaves for the nation's capital tonight, was singled out by Udall for advice on the basis of Farr's work on scenic road conservation and related measures in the California Senate.

In a letter to Farr, the interior secretary stated that the Rockefeller commission on outdoor resources will present its report Wednesday and that the department plans a legislative program "in response" to the report.

Noting that California has been a leader in answering conservation problems, Udall said he was advised that Farr has championed conservation measures. He added that he hoped Farr would serve in an advisory capacity to the staff.

Senator Farr, a member of the natural resources committee of the state Senate, authored the first bill in the U. S. on scenic easements — to protect Monterey county's magnificent coastline — and a bill for a state planning agency to coordinate master planning. He also initiated action on a scenic highways report to be ready March 15.

Farr Back From Talks With Stewart Udall, Bob Kennedy

State Sen. Fred Farr (D-Carmel) has returned home after a 12-day coast-to-coast trip which included a conference with Interior Secretary Stewart Udall in Washington.

In addition to talking to Udall, Farr talked with Atty. Gen. Robert Kennedy and various other governmental officials in Washington. He also inspected several eastern parkways, then flew back to the West Coast where he attended opening sessions of the budget session of the Legislature.

Reporting on his trip, Farr said he discussed development and protection of outdoor resources with Udall with emphasis on national parks and seashore areas.

Farr was invited to Washington by Udall who regards the Monterey County senator as one of the country's leading conservationists.

Farr said that President Kennedy soon will present Congress with a program for expansion of parks and recreational facilities and that a number of points covered in the conversation with Udall likely will be included in the President's message.

Farr said that Udall is keenly interested in joint federal, state and local participation in development of outdoor resources. "Such expansion," Farr said, "is needed now, not only because of population increase but because we now have an opportunity to get lands which we may be unable to acquire in the future."

In his meeting with Robert Kennedy, Farr said he discussed the possibility of using federal prisoners on fire prevention projects in California forests.

There are 25,000 federal prisoners in California, Farr said. He said he believes some use should be made of these men provided that the work they do does not infringe upon the free labor market.

Meeting with Eugene Merrill, deputy secretary of the Army, Farr said he learned that Washington is pledging close cooperation with Monterey County in the proposed San Antonio Dam project in southern Monterey County.

Acreage

The Salinas Valley Water Advisory Commission needs to acquire several thousand acres of land on the Hunter-Liggett Military Reservation for dam storage.

Farr further stated, on the same subject, that he intends to request that an allocation of $3,800,000 in state funds for the San Antonio Dam be placed on the special call of the current session of the Legislature.

The funds, referred to as Davis-Grunsky funds, are available for projects with recreational benefits. Farr said he feels the San Antonio Dam project should qualify for such state assistance.

In Washington, Farr also met with Postmaster General Edward Day, U. S. Treasurer Elizabeth Smith, F. Dutton, assistant secretary of state for congressional relations and several other officials.

shchev's son-in-law, Alexei Adzhubei.

"It was extremely impressive," Farr said, "to watch the President of the United States answer questions from reporters from all over the world. Some of the questions were very tough and the President handled them smoothly and in fine humor."

Parkways

Farr said he looked over a number of parkways during a motor trip along the East Coast.

He said he noted that the eastern parkways take in a much wider right-of-way than California freeways, thus allowing more extensive landscaping. From an engineering standpoint, he said there really isn't too much difference between a parkway and a freeway. "There are practically no crossings at grade. . . . The difference, therefore, it seems to me, is not so much in designation of parkway or freeway as it is in handling details like landscaping and construction of bridges."

Farr Blasted by Seaside's Council Over Freeway Idea

Seaside councilmen were up in arms yesterday over State Sen. Fred S. Farr's suggestion to Gov. Edmund G. Brown that the Monterey Peninsula freeway route be changed.

The representatives of the 20,000 people of Seaside charged that the senator from Carmel had recommended the "foothill" route without regard for Seaside.

The matter came before the council at an agenda study session yesterday.

Traffic Deaths

Councilmen said that any change will only delay construction of the freeway, prolonging the present traffic hazard in Seaside where a number of pedestrians have been killed on the state highway.

Since the council has made known its stand in several dispatches to Farr, it was particularly irked by this statement the senator made: "I feel that my constituents as a whole are not as concerned with the name 'freeway' or 'expressway' as much as they are with the kind of treatment given to the state highway in the City of Monterey . . ."

"I can tell you that Mr. Farr is not representing the view of his many constituents in Seaside," Mayor Beauford T. Anderson said.

Costly Change

Councilman Joseph A. Cota said the state already has spent millions of dollars in acquiring the freeway right of way. Councilman Daniel Niel said that any action that would hold up construction of the freeway was disturbing to him.

The mayor said that the elected representatives of the cities of Monterey, San

City and Seaside had met upon several occasions and had agreed upon the freeway route as now planned by the state.

"In fact," Anderson said, "The very 'foothill' route that Farr suggests was considered upon a number of occasions. There even were public hearings on the matter and that route was tossed out."

The proposed foothill route would parallel the Fort Ord fence at Seaside's eastern boundary. This, the councilman said, would have a det-

'Foothill' Hudson Asks Cost Study

Freeway Fight Looms Over Routing Plans

CARMEL — Another freeway battle is looming on the Monterey Peninsula.

Plans for rerouting southbound traffic on the proposed Hatton Canyon Freeway just east of here along the existing Highway 1 have run into a snag.

A group of Carmel area residents approached the State Division of Highways late last year, asking the change. Under the group's proposal, two southbound lanes would run along Highway 1 with two northbound lanes through Hatton Canyon.

The group has also asked for an underpass at Highway 1 and Ocean avenue and a parkway or scenic highway development rather than a freeway.

But Robert Bradford, State Director of Public Works, has informed the group that any changes would have to meet freeway standards. In a letter to the group he indicated the suggested rerouting of a portion of the traffic might be agreeable, but it must held to the freeway standards.

The Carmel group, which includes Ted Durelin, C. W. Fisher, Thomas K. Perry and Monterey Peninsula Supervisor Tom Hudson, is not likely to agree to Bradford's conditions.

They are expected to reply that a scenic highway is more in keeping with the Monterey Peninsula.

The current development is the second snag which the State has run into over the proposed freeway past Carmel.

In 1953 hundreds of Carmel residents protested the State's plan to run both north and southbound lanes down the existing route of Highway 1.

In 1957 the State and residents resolved their differences, and a freeway agreement was signed with the county calling for a log to the east along Hatton Canyon. The freeway would end at Carmel Valley road governments in scenic corridors should regulate land use; initiate planning in advance of impending development; courageously explore new methods and programs; thus make conservation realistically attainable along scenic routes.

In this area, where the scenic highway concept originated, we already are putting such suggestions into effect with the coast master plan being prepared by Monterey County.

"The scenic highway program will require the positive support of many organizations and individuals throughout the state in order to accomplish by legislative action the recommendations to the 1963 Legislature," Senator Farr told the Pine Cone.

We know he will receive support from this area. What we need to do is help him gain the support of the rest of California. It is a challenge.

State Senator Fred Farr of Carmel, last Thursday, presented to the California Senate a report on a preliminary plan for scenic highways in this state. The same day, Governor Edmund G. Brown called for designation as "scenic highways" the 5,000 miles of roadway in California so proposed in the report.

Senator Farr will submit a bill to the California Legislature in 1963 containing the governor's proposal. The preliminary plan for a system of scenic highways in California is the first comprehensive plan for a full scenic highway system offered in any state, according to Senator Farr.

And it all started here. Three years ago, residents of Monterey County, particularly of the Monterey Peninsula and the coastal area below Carmel, alarmed by the fact that Highway One from Carmel south to the San Luis Obispo County line was included in the state's freeway system plans, clamored angrily about devastation to cliffs and canyons if any freeway were built along the coast.

and varied scenic beauty. It is a system worth fighting for. Senator Farr says, "It is urgent that we act now to protect existing scenic roads. We are not only losing them, but we are losing the sense of place and the sense of history that they represent. It is one of the longest and most difficult battles we will be the annual Katherine

Seeks 100 For Recreation Aid

Mercury Sacramento Bureau

SACRAMENTO — A bill allocating $3,820,000 in state funds to finance recreation features of the San Antonio Dam project in Monterey County was introduced Monday by Sen. Fred Farr (D-Carmel).

The money is available under the Davis-Grunsky Act, which earmarks state funds for local water conservation facilities.

Farr said that as soon as the state contribution is approved, the Monterey County Flood Control and Water Conservation District intends to submit to its voters a 12-million-dollar bond measure to pay for the bulk of the project.

The vote on the bonds is expected during the summer.

The dam, on San Antonio River in the Hunter-Liggett Military Reservation, will have a capacity of 350,000 acre feet of water. Its minimum pool will be 20,000 acre feet.

Stewart 'Not Speaking for Me,' Says Farr

State Sen. Fred Farr (D-Carmel) today said he wants everyone to know that "Bill Stewart is not speaking for me."

William K. Stewart has been advancing Farr's name as a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Congress.

As to the possibility of his running, Farr declared, "I haven't closed the door but certainly I haven't been promoting it to any degree whatsoever."

Farr said that some people seem to have gotten the impression that "Stewart has been in daily communication with me. This is not the case. Two or three weeks ago he told me that he was interested in my getting into this thing and that is the extent of it."

Farr added that "Bill Stewart is a friend of mine and so is Bob Bowersox. (Bowersox is a declared candidate for the congressional race but Stewart does not agree with his political philosophies).

"Bill Stewart speaks for himself and I speak for myself," Farr said.

Farr Leaves Door Open For 'Draft'

CARMEL — State Sen. Fred Farr (D-Carmel) Wednesday left the door open to a possible "draft" as a candidate for congressman in the newly formed 12th Congressional District.

Farr, who comes up for re-election to his Senate post in 1964, added however, that he hasn't made "any steps toward being a candidate and am doing nothing to encourage any draft."

Farr's comment followed hard on the heels of Dr. Robert Bowersox's announcement of his candidacy for the position. Bowersox, 39, a Democrat, is a resident of Monterey and has been active in county Democratic politics for some time.

If nominated, he would face Assemblyman Glenn Coolidge (R-Felton) who has also announced his candidacy. The candidates will face each other in next November's election.

William K. Stewart of Carmel Highlands, twice an unsuccessful candidate for the post of Congressman, announced Tuesday he was opening a "draft Farr" drive.

But Stewart did not close the door on his own candidacy in case Farr did not declare himself.

"I don't know if I could win," Stewart said. "Perhaps I could. But I know that Fred Farr could win and Bob Bowersox can't."

Farr is considered by most leading Democrats in Monterey County as the strongest candidate to oppose Coolidge. The new district is comprised of Monterey, San Benito, Santa Cruz and San Luis Obispo Counties.

Demos Set 'Sunday Punch' To Win Congressional Race

Twelfth congressional district Democrats, warned not to be too "cool about Coolidge," readied their Sunday punch for the June 1962 elections at a nearly six-hour session at the WonderLodge yesterday afternoon.

With what actually were minor differences, the 139 representatives of the new four-county congressional district came up with a staff of officers, a constitution and by-laws and a determination to bury individual differences in an all-out push to defeat Republican Glenn E. Coolidge of Felton, present 27th district assemblyman, in the congressional race.

Despite the apparent availability of William K. Stewart of Pacific Grove, and the avowed candidacy of Dr. Robert J. Bowersox of Monterey for the post, there were many expectant glances toward the wings where Sen. Fred Farr (D-Carmel) could be waiting.

In fact, Stewart at one point in the meeting said "Fred Farr is the best candidate. He is wavering. Give him a chance. Don't push him."

This observation was buttressed by another party official who said that "after the preliminary fireworks there will be a 'draft Farr' movement which probably will be needed."

Senator Farr, with his wife, was on hand for the session but in his preliminary remarks and in his active participation in the meeting he gave no indication of his intention. Introduced as a "senior Democratic officeholder" by meeting Chairman Stewart, the senator said he thought "we will elect a Democrat in the new 12th congressional district."

Backs Brown

"What comes out of this meeting," he said, "will be terribly important to the governor's race." He urged support of Gov. Edmund G. Brown and his "wonderful program" and urged a "unity of purpose in the new district."

Campbell and Hurt To Head Council

James Campbell of Carmel was named chairman of the 12th Congressional district of the Council of Democratic clubs at an organization meeting held at the WonderLodge yesterday.

Campbell, a selection of the club's nominating committee, defeated Major Jack Cowan of Carmel Valley, who was nominated from the floor, 47-44.

Grover Hurt of Salinas was elected Monterey county vice chairman, defeating Julia Schloss of Carmel, a nominating committee selection.

Clell Whelchel of San Luis Obispo is the vice chairman for San Luis Obispo county. He defeated John Barlett of Paso Robles, also a selection of the committee.

Representing San Benito county as vice chairman will be John O'Brien of Hollister. The Santa Cruz county vice chairman is Mrs. Lilly Bourriague.

Patricia Lane of Carmel is secretary and Mrs. Anne Ryan of Santa Cruz is treasurer.

The endorsing convention will be held in Salinas Feb. 25. Robert Tuttle of Salinas suggested the early date in order to give candidates ample opportunity to take advantage of whatever action is taken by the endorsing committee.

Senator Farr Is Silent on Candidacy

SAN FRANCISCO — State Sen. Fred Farr (D., Carmel) was still mum last night about his political plans this year.

Farr, one of dozens of dignitaries introduced at the $100 a plate Democratic banquet for Gov. Edmund G. Brown, is the object of a congressional "draft" movement launched recently by W. K. Stewart of Pacific Grove. Stewart, a two-time loser in past congressional races, was not present.

To Visit Washington

Farr said last night that he plans to go to Washington, D. C. next week. When asked if this means he will confer with Kennedy administration personnel before reaching a decision, he declined comment.

Farr does not have to run for re-election to the state senate until 1964, and presumably could have a "free ride," win or lose, for Congress. However, he is known to be reluctant to leave California and the Brown administration which he has backed strongly.

If he decided to go, he would face Dr. Robert Bowersox, a Monterey physician, in the June primary. Most Democrats believe he would win handily.

Coolidge Opponent

He would then probably face Assemblyman Glenn Coolidge (R., Felton), the Republican-endorsed nominee, in the November general election. Coolidge, so far at least, has faced no opposition within his party.

Only a small gathering of Salinas and Monterey county Democrats attended the reception and dinner for Brown at the packed Fairmont hotel.

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

SAN FRANCISCO, February 28 -- The appointment of State Senator Fred S. Farr as Monterey County chairman of Governor Edmund G. "Pat" Brown's re-election campaign was announced here today.

The appointment was made by Thomas C. Lynch and Senator George Miller, Jr., Co-chairmen of the Northern California Committee to Re-elect Governor Brown.

"Pat Brown merits re-election on his record and his program," said Senator Farr in accepting the post. "I have served for seven years in the Legislature, and I have observed first hand the tremendous development of California during his administration."

The senator said the record was "particularly outstanding" in the fields of education, natural resources, mental health and the judicial area, where the Governor has taken an enlightened, non-partisan approach toward appointments.

"In the last four years, California has become the National leader in many areas," said Senator Farr. "It is the first state to put together a comprehensive, coordinated program for education on the higher level. The State Water Plan is the most imaginative program of its kind ever proposed. Farr Plan For State Architect Removal of the state's chief architect from civil service and cabinet status for the State Planning Office were advocated last night by State Sen. Fred Farr (D-Carmel).

Farr was the principal speaker at a dinner meeting of the board of directors of the American Institute of Architects' California Council at the Mark Thomas Inn.

Much of Farr's talk was aimed at the State Division of Architecture, which the AIA group over the years has accused of designing humdrum structures and spending far more to do it than would have private architects.

Beauty

"State buildings should be the most beautiful buildings in California," Farr said, contending that the only way to achieve such a goal is "to get them out of bureaucracy."

"The position of state architect, Farr said, should be 'removed from civil service.'"

"I'd like to see it in the governor's cabinet. It should be an executive position, responsible to the governor. That might make considerable changes as far as state buildings are concerned," the senator said, adding that he'd like to see architectural competitions held for the design of public structures.

Examples

On a recent trip to the East, Farr said, he saw freeways and parkways in New York, New Jersey and Connecticut "that set examples for many things we should try to do in California."

Pointing to the Nimitz Freeway between San Jose and Berkeley with its "series of standard overpasses" as a bad example, Farr said: "We can do better than that in California. There are many ugly sights along our freeways that can be covered up with imagination. There is a great job to be done."

The State Planning Office, Farr said, should be in charge of all planning in California. He said that agency should be taken out of the department of finance and given cabinet status.

Outside Help

At the same time, Farr said, outside consultants should be called to help solve such particular problems as Monterey's proposed "can of worms" freeway interchange.

Presiding at the dinner at which Farr spoke were William V. Shaw of Carmel, a member of the AIA board and William Stephen Allen of San Francisco, president-elect.

On the first day of the two-day meeting, which was to conclude today, the architects also elected the following officers: Albert M. Dreyfus of Sacramento, vice president; George P. Simonds of Oakland, secretary; Fred E. Hummel of Santa Barbara, treasurer, and C. Day Woodford of Los Angeles, member-at-large.

Farr, Pattee Asked to Marina Water Meeting

The Marina Water Board has asked Assemblyman Alan Pattee (R-Corral de Tierra) and State Sen. Fred S. Farr (D-Carmel) to meet with them in a public session to review the bond election situation in the community.

Robert S. Tuttle, counsel for the Marina County Water District, said letters were sent to the two legislators early this week asking them to set a meeting date.

"The meeting will be for Farr and Pattee to become acquainted with Marina's problem of getting a two-thirds majority to support a bond issue for water or sewage," Tuttle reported.

"This might help them vote on a proposal to suspend the two-thirds requirement on general obligation bonds, which we understand will be introduced at the special session of the State Legislature."

Two Failures

An $850,000 bond issue to finance acquisition of the Vista Del Camino Water Co. and provide additional service has failed twice in Marina elections by small margins.

Supporters of the bonds charge a clear majority of the community wants the bonds passed but an organized minority is dictating to the rest of the community.

The bonds failed by one vote in November and by eight votes last week.

"We're stuck," commented William Williams, chairman of the water board. "If we can't get two-thirds to vote for the water bonds, we can't get two-thirds to vote for sewers either since water has outvoted sewers on three occasions."

Disastrous

Williams said for the fast-growing community to wait much longer without beginning to take action on municipal needs would be disastrous.

The area is the scene of mushrooming subdivisions that have made Marina the fastest-growing section of the county. These homes are now served by septic tanks and the private water firm. Older residents get their water from private wells.

Gov. Brown Starts Work At Harbor 'Officially'

By Arnold Wechter

With a couple of shovelfuls of sand, Gov. Edmund G. (Pat) Brown officially started work yesterday on the $5.5 million Santa Cruz small craft harbor at the Twin Lakes beach surf.

Looking every bit the successful campaigner, Gov. Brown spoke, laughed and clowned with the approximately 350 persons on hand for the event.

Brown, in a surprisingly non-partisan speech, plugged hard for the $150 million Proposition 5 which will allow the state park system to acquire and develop new parks, beaches and boating facilities.

"If we do not act today," he told the assemblage, "some of California's scenic wonders will be lost forever."

Dressed natively in a gray suit, Brown appeared tan and healthy. He joked with the crowd and appeared to be enjoying the campaigning as he works for his second term in office.

At the beginning of his speech, he told the audience about the seven million people who can be expected to migrate to California within the next ten years. When a member of the audience shouted "no," Brown laughed and answered quickly, "we can't constitutionally stop them for moving to our beautiful state."

He quickly added: "I see no carpetbaggers here." It was a pointed reference to Richard Nixon's comment on the recent trip to California by President John Kennedy.

Norman Lezin, representing the Greater Santa Cruz Chamber of Commerce, acted as master of ceremonies.

Lezin, recently appointed to the Santa Cruz city council, introduced Worth Brown, chairman of the Santa Cruz Port district; Louis L. Haber, vice chairman of the state small craft harbor commission; Burt B. Snyder Jr., Santa Cruz mayor, and Brig. Gen. Arthur H. Frye Jr., army corps of engineers.

All made short speeches on various aspects of the harbor.

Brown, who paid honor to local citizens Brown, James Leask, Don Falconer, Alfred Haber and Malio Stagnaro in his speech, said the money expended on the harbor will be the "best investment we can make in this important part of our state."

Brown was emphatic in pointing out the danger to California's scenic wonders.

"We recognize that California has the most beautiful coast and mountains and forests in the United States. But without planning and actions, these would be endangered—and so would an income in billions that enriches our economy," he intoned.

"I agree with Secretary of the Interior Udall, who has said that 'What we save now may be all we will ever save.'"

Brown pointed out that while California's population was growing by 50 per cent—use of our beaches and parks is skyrocketing by 359 per cent. "But the demands in the future will be even greater," he said.

He noted that the five-year program for California's beaches and parks, published last year, said that the five Santa Cruz beaches in state ownership could not handle the visitors. That plan, according to the governor, proposed parking for Seacliff beach, and intervening lands between Seacliff and New Brighton beach.

The plan also asked acquisition of rolling upland at Hanresa and further development of Natural Bridges, Sunset and Palm beaches.

"Last year," he commented, "we purchased 488 acres of land adjacent to Big Basin Redwoods State park. And in my new budget for 1962-63, we have provided $175,000 for 85 units for Henry Cowell Redwoods State park and $300,000 for 90 camp units in the Big Basin Redwoods service area. And we have just acquired acreage for parking areas in Natural Bridges park."

In obviously fine fettle, Brown was presented a lei by three bathing beauties representing the Capitola Begonia festival. As the lei was placed over his head, he reminded the girls that in Hawaii a kiss is traditional—he was obliged.

Brown also joined some youngsters in a pick-up baseball game. But from his swing Willie Mays need not worry for his job.

After leaving the Twin Lakes area, Gov. Brown hopped down to the Casa del Rey where he spoke to senior citizens and then toured the boardwalk shaking hands.

Governor Brown Makes Small Craft Harbor Start Official

Governor Edmund G. Brown addressed a gathering of several hundred persons at Twin Lakes beach yesterday and then scooped up a symbolic spadeful of sand to make official the ground breaking for the $5.5 million Santa Cruz small craft harbor. The governor, speaking from a stand near the eventual harbor entrance, urged passage of Proposition 5 in the June primaries to provide $150 million for preservation and enhancement of California beach and park assets in the face of an expected seven million population influx in the next decade. Flanking the governor in the ground breaking are Worth Brown, Santa Cruz Port district chairman, left, and Louis Haber, vice chairman of the state small craft harbor commission William Stewart, candidate for the 12th congressional Democratic nomination; State Senator Fred Farr (D-Monterey county); and Assemblyman Glenn Coolidge, Republican 12th district candidate, are standing left to right behind the two Browns.

Dear Mr. Winton: After examining the Final Draft of the Citizens

We note that many of the recommendations in the Report have been

We are particularly concerned because there is little provision in

Anti-Communist Law

Some question has been raised, entirely unofficially, concerning a proposed anti-Communist amendment to the California Constitution.

Petitions are being circulated by thousands of people among the voters throughout this state. The purpose is to obtain a sufficient number of signatures so that the amendment can be placed on the ballot for a vote by the electorate of California this year.

The proposed constitutional amendment would prohibit Communist action, Communist front, Communist, and subversive organizations from being recognized as political parties in California. It would refuse to allow the names of the organizations or their members to be printed on an election ballot.

The law would prohibit the holding of public office by members of such organizations. It would refuse to grant tax exemptions to members of such organizations. There are other important safeguards against subversion the amendment would set up.

The vital thing is that the question has informally been raised as to whether this proposed amendment would be constitutional if it should be passed by a vote of the people.

The Office of Legislative Counsel of the State of California, the duty of which is to analyze all proposed legislation coming before the California Legislature so that assemblymen and senators can be aware of whether they are voting for a legal or an illegal measure, has made a complete assessment of this proposed amendment.

Here is what Angus C. Morrison, chief legislative counsel states in his opinion:

"Many of the provisions of the measure would present serious constitutional problems if they are literally construed, and we are therefore unable to guarantee that the measure would be held to be constitutional. However, the California Supreme Court has upheld similar statutes by reading into them provisions needed to satisfy due process requirements and, on this basis, we believe the measure would be held as constitutional."

Right to Vote

Editor, The Herald:

After reading an article, "Francis Defends Anti-Red Measure" I first became confused. But upon rereading the article, I arrived at the conclusion that the article was well written and clearly stated.

We can start with the last paragraph, "William L. Stewart, bar president, said the association would hear a speaker 'from the other side' at an early date." The "other side" of anti-subversive legislation, would be pro-subversive legislation.

The next to last paragraph also indicated confusion: "One bar member, Patricia Lane of Carmel, feared that her colleagues might pass a resolution endorsing the Francis amendment. She finally pushed through a resolution declaring business ended for the night. She then left."

It's a shame that Patricia Lane made this resolution to end business for the evening. It would have been interesting to find out the sentiments of her colleagues and how the Monterey County Bar Assn. as a body feels about this amendment. This type of shotgun tactic tends to make mockery of the legal profession.

Sen. Fred Farr obviously is strongly opposed to the Francis Amendment. This in itself is not confusing but the opposition to having this amendment placed on the ballot for public vote, in my opinion, is confused thinking. Perhaps the senator feels that we as voters are not mature enough to decide the issue for ourselves. With all the academic freedom being shoved down our throats lately, we should be able to decide any issue affecting our society. Or perhaps the senator feels that the less the voting public knows about the unpleasant realities of what is needed in this state in regards to control of subversive activities, the less emotional conflict they will suffer. . . .

I should think Sen. Farr would want to have this amendment on the ballot, then campaign against it. This is the true test of what the public wants. . . .

Candidates Night

Sen. Farr Says Anti-Subversive Proposal Is Unconstitutional

State Sen. Fred Farr (D-Carmel) last night denounced the current anti-subversive initiative movement in California as an "attack on schools" and labeled the proposed Francis amendment unconstitutional.

Speaking off the cuff at a "candidates night" program at Democratic headquarters in Alisal, Farr said there has been a "tremendous amount of misunderstanding" about the proposal which would outlaw the Communist party and curb activities of "front" organizations.

"This, I believe, would be a very dangerous Constitutional amendment," Farr said.

"Any county grand jury may find an organization to be subversive or Communist-dominated," he said.

"Then anyone belonging to one of the groups could be removed from public office," he added, noting that the term public employees includes teachers.

Basic faults of the program, Farr charged, are that there is no right provided for the organization concerned to appear before the jury, nor is there any right of appeal.

"They have taken on the public school system of California," he said.

Farr said that similar proposals have been knocked out by the state legislature, "so they're trying to get it in through the initiative process."

"This is an attack on our school system."

Farr said that Gov. Edmund G. Brown is opposing the measure while former Vice President Richard M. Nixon will not support it because it is "unconstitutional" in part.

"Strong pressure" is being used to get the needed 600,000 signatures to put the measure on the November ballot, Farr asserted.

One worried person, Farr said, asked him if he would be considered "pro-Communist" if he didn't sign the petition.

The reference to Nixon was the only favorable one Farr had during the evening for the man he earlier accused of seeking California's governorship as a "stepping stone to Washington."

After assailing Nixon's "very bad advice" to Republicans who opposed Brown's budget and school bond recommendations, Farr even found a few kind words for another Republican gubernatorial candidate, Assemblyman Joseph Shell of Los Angeles.

"I would say Joe Shell is better acquainted with California than Nixon."

As expected, he put in some strong plugs for the present Democratic administrations — at Sacramento, as well as in Washington, D.C.

Winton 'Shocked' by Use of Report

Anti-Communism Group Explains

Assemblyman Gordon Winton (D-Merced) said today that he was "shocked" that a minority report was used as the basis for a pro-Francis Amendment advertisement in The Herald on April 28.

The full-page advertisement was headed "Is There Subversive Teaching in Our Schools?" It was paid for by the Monterey County branch of the Californians' Committee to Combat Communism.

The advertisement quoted a minority report of the Citizens Advisory Commission to the 1961 Joint Legislative Interim Committee on the Public Education

Winton expressed "shock" that such a report should be used as a means to obtaining signatures to place the Francis Amendment, which would in effect outlaw communism in California, on the November ballot.

The Monterey County branch of the Californians' Committee to Combat Communism issued the following reply to the Winton statement:

"Our advertisement made it quite clear that the statements it quoted came from the minority report, which was included in the Joint Interim Committee's report, an official document of the State of California. The advertisement carried the names of the three signers of this minority report.

"The Joint Interim Committee's report includes a statement signed by the members of the committee, including Assemblyman Winton and Sen. Fred Farr, stating: 'It is the hope of the Joint Committee that the legislators of the state and all other citizens interested in the future of California will give careful attention and thoughtful study to this document.'

No Disagreement

"Although there is plainly no disagreement between our organization and Mr. Winton as to the fact that our advertisement quoted a minority report, we are amazed that he is 'shocked' that we gave 'careful attention and thoughtful study' to the document, as he recommended. We are perplexed that Sen. Farr, who gave the same advice, should now attack us for doing so.

"The purpose of the advertisement was to reply to an attack on the Francis Amendment by the California Teachers Assn.

"We agree that such tests, improper as they may be, are not the main issue involved in the Francis Amendment.

"The issue of the Francis Amendment is this: Do you believe the people of California should be given an opportunity to vote for a measure designed to combat the Communist conspiracy in California? We urge all persons of such belief to sign the petition to submit this measure to the voters."

Howard Jarvis — A Conservative Candidate Visits

By EARL HOFELDT

Howard Jarvis of Los Angeles, a Republican who admits being called a traitor to the Republican Party, visited The Herald offices today.

He is running on a write-in campaign for U.S. Senate.

For The Conservatives

At the outset of an interview, Jarvis frankly said that he is not predicting a victory for himself. He said he is campaigning for two main reasons:

1 — To give "conservative" voters, both Republicans and Democrats, someone to vote for on Nov. 6

2 — To help promote the Louis F. Francis anti-subversive amendment which will appear on the Nov. 6 ballot.

Jarvis said he doesn't care who wins between Kuchel and Democrat Richard Richards who are in the runoff for U.S. Senate. Both are liberals, Jarvis said.

No Choice

Jarvis said he actually regards Richards a bit higher than Kuchel because Richards says, "I am a liberal." Kuchel, he said, contends to be a conservative but in fact "his philosophy and that of Richards are alike."

Taking pride in being tagged an "extreme conservative," Jarvis said he feels no allegiance to the Republican Party "as it is constituted at this time. . . . Sure, they call me a traitor, but it doesn't bother me at all."

Jarvis said it is his goal to build a conservative force in California. The June primary, he said, showed that more than 600,000 Republicans voted as true conservatives and that more than 300,000 Democrats voted similarly.

"The conservatives," he said, "are now disenfranchised in general elections. They can either vote for a liberal or not vote at all."

Jarvis described State

HOWARD JARVIS

Sen. Fred Farr (D-Carmel) as the man leading the fight against the Francis Amendment in California. He scoffed at criticisms leveled by Farr and others at Section 3 in the amendment which would authorize several groups including grand juries, to designate individuals and organizations as subversive.

Jarvis said the section provides no cause for worry. "The Federal Constitution controls state constitutions and state laws. If any individuals' rights are infringed on, all he must do is apply for a habeas corpus under the Federal Constitution and the matter will be settled. I think this eliminates the 'bugaboo' on the Francis Amendment."

Jarvis addressed the Pacific Grove Rotary Club today and will speak to the Monterey Peninsula Junior Chamber of Commerce tomorrow.

The Primary Propositions

There will be six state propositions submitted to the voters at the June 5 primary elections.

(Let us hasten to add parenthetically that the so-called Francis Amendment outlawing communism in California is not one of them. Although this measure is the subject of much fiery debate, it has not yet even qualified to go on the ballot. It can not be submitted to the voters before the November election. There will be ample time for its full examination and dispassionate discussion. We regard the present hullabaloo over the Francis Amendment as premature as it is hysterical.)

Our heartfelt thanks goes to our mayor, John Davis and members of the city council, to Dr. James Nash and to Supervisor Harold Henry, to State Senator Fred Farr, Assemblyman Alan Pattee, Lt. Governor Glen Anderson, to Harry Casey, Ellis Tavernetti and Ree Grim, to Gordon Daley, James Walker, Kenneth Bengard and Chris Bengard and to all the others who worked on committees to present King City's case to the Highway Commission.

These men had nothing personal to gain in any event. They conducted themselves in a gentlemanly manner with dignity at all times. The result of their effort proves that there is integrity in government, that local civic and municipal groups, pulling together can achieve success when their cause is right.

Now that the decision has been reached let us all, in whatever way possible, contribute to the betterment of our city—its schools, and all its civic and social, religious and business endeavors—and conduct ourselves to further better relationships throughout Southern Monterey County.

Senator Farr Strongly Urges Commission to Stick to "K"

State Senator Fred Farr last week strongly advocated that the state highway commission abide by its agreement with the City of King and County of Monterey for the K-Line by-pass of King City.

The highway commission is expected to make a decision on the King City matter before the end of April. Farr's letter to Robert Bradford, chairman of the commission, read as follows

Dear Bob:

This will confirm my conversation a few days ago in my office in which I stated that I feel very strongly about the Highway Commission's abiding by the agreement entered into with King City concerning the K-Line.

Many people in King City would be severely injured if the K-Line is not followed. Relying upon the fact that the Highway Commission entered into an agreement with King City and with the Board of Supervisors, followed by the acquisition of land for the right-of-way, people in King City have invested large amounts of money in many business enterprises, many of which would be severely jeopardized by a change of route.

Furthermore, the precedent that would be set by failure to abide by the K-Line would in my opinion be very damaging to the the Commission, in that people throughout the State could not be sure once the agreement was entered into and the land purchased that the Commission would abide by their agreement.

I would appreciate your bringing this to the attention of members of the Highway Commission.

Sincerely,
Fred S. Farr

Farr Backs City Stand

"I am definitely in favor of the state keeping its agreement with the City of King and County of Monterey for the 'K-Line' by-pass of King City. I am convinced that a west of the Salinas River routing would severely damage the economy of the entire community."

This was the statement of State Senator Fred Farr, who met here last week with city and chamber representatives to discuss King City's battle with the highway engineers over the future location of Highway 101 when it is converted to freeway status.

A FULL HEARING before the state highway commission is scheduled for Tuesday, Oct. 31 in the high school auditorium at 1:30 p.m. All persons interested in the location of the route are invited to attend the meeting and make their views known to the commissioners.

"I will certainly be here and will plead the case of the community," said Farr. "I attended the public hearing conducted by the division of highway last spring and did not commit myself at that time. I had many legislative matters on my mind and did not have an opportunity to fully study the issue. I was not able to remain for the entire meeting. But since that time I have familiarized myself with the testimony given that day and with all pertinent facts to the case."

"I am now convinced that irreparable harm would come to King City through loss of the highway such as would be the case with a west-side freeway."

"I DO NOT KNOW of any community that would be so discriminated against as would King City by a 101 by-pass should the engineers recommendation be followed."

At the time of the engineers hearing in May Farr had received several hundred letters, telegrams and phone calls from local residents and farmers of the area, the overwhelming percentage of these urging him to support the community's "K-Line" agreement. He apologized because the pressure of his duties in the senate did not enable him to conscientiously do so at the time.

"It would have been the popular thing to make such a statement at your hearing," said senator Farr, "but I could not do so without studying fully. Now that I have done so I will be here in your corner for the commission hearing."

Farr went over the route in question, by airplane and car before returning to his Carmel home Friday.

What Will Happen to California's Five Bond Issues on June Ballot?

SACRAMENTO (CNS)—Consolidated with the June primary election will be a statewide ballot on five bond issues, which if passed will put the people of the state of California in debt to the tune of $970,000,000.

Originally, Gov. Edmund G. Brown attempted to secure voting on two of the bond issues in June, and two in November. The fifth was a matter of legislative direction, and would have appeared on the November ballot in any case.

He was frustrated in this attempt by action of the legislature, however, and now the people of the state have an opportunity to decide on the entire package at one selection. The frustration resulted from maneuvering in the legislature, and the efforts of the Republican minority to force the vote at one time.

Between now and June 5, there will be plenty said about the merits of the five bond issues. Already, committees are starting to work financing campaigns to urge passage of certain of the measures.

But there is a big question as to whether the people of California want to increase the public debt to a total of more than $6 billion.

Already, the state has authorized bonds totaling approximately $5,218,000,000. Not all of these bonds, of course, have been sold, but they may be sold at any time funds are needed for the various projects authorized by the people.

It is true also that some of the outstanding and unsold bonds are payable from funds other than the general fund of the state of California.

But even so, the credit of the state of California is technically obligated now to the extent of $5,218,000,000, and the additional issues, if they all carry in June, will make the total $6,188,000,000.

The concept of bond financing has been in general usage for a good many years. There was a highway bond issue in 1909, which was just paid off last year, 53 years following authorization by the people. The state paid four per cent interest on this issue of $18 million.

And the state still is paying for the second highway bond issue of 1915, which was for $15 million. Bonds cost more that year. The charge was four and a half per cent. These two issues, it must be recalled were before World War I.

Generally, financing through bonds costs about double the amount of pay-as-you-go financing, which means that the actual cash required to retire the already authorized and proposed bond issues if adopted, will be close to $12 billion dollars.

Between now and election time, it is conceivable that a good many people will give some grave thought as to whether they want to encumber their children and grandchildren with that type of debt.

Voters could, of course, turn down all five of the proposed bond issues, and thus serve notice to government that they are sick and tired of going into debt, without a prospect of getting close to out in the foreseeable future.

Between now and June 5, this column will discuss the bond issues individually.

Chances of Construction Are Report

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Prospects of a settlement soon in the 40-day old Northern California construction strike appeared dim today following the frank admission by negotiators that the latest round of talks had produced no progress.

Teamsters negotiator James Ward yesterday said.

Education Program Stymied

By De Van L. Shumway

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Mr. Voter. You tossed a bombshell in Tuesday's California primary election.

And state officials — from the governor down — wonder if you knew what you were doing.

Final figures from Secy. of State Frank M. Jordan showed today that you decisively turned down a $270 million bond issue to keep the state's building program on schedule. The vote against proposition No. 3 was 2,191,412 to 1,309,982.

As a result, Gov. Edmund G. Brown intends, according to informed capitol sources, to call a special session of the legislature late this month to consider putting the bond issue on the November general election.

Target Date Set

The governor set a tentative target date of June 20 for the legislature to meet, the sources said. Brown is expected to announce this formally on Tuesday.

Proposition 3 was titled on the ballot "for the state construction program bond act of 1962." While it did not mention that it was for educational purposes, 80 per cent of the bond money was to have been used to build additional facilities at state colleges and university campuses.

Educators insisted in a meeting with Brown in San Francisco Thursday that a special session is necessary to give the voters another chance this fall. But some legislators felt the voters had made a clear-cut decision and the whole matter should now be delayed until 1964.

Two-Party Support

Demands for a special session have come from both political parties, including Republican Richard M. Nixon. See: BROWN over Page 2

Legislature Winds Up '62 Session

SACRAMENTO, (UPI) — Most members of the legislature turned to campaigning today following the wind-up of the 1962 session.

Mindful of the election year, leaders of both parties claimed victory for their side in the session which dragged on two weeks past the scheduled adjournment.

Although the final act of the session yesterday was the adoption of a proposal to raise legislators' pay, the lawmakers took positive action on four other important bills during the two-month session.

They passed a budget totaling almost $2.9 billion, very close to the amount originally requested by Gov. Edmund G. Brown, himself a candidate for re-election this year.

They endorsed bond issues totaling $970 million — for school and college construction, recreation, the Cal-Vet home program and low-rent housing for the aged — and they decided all the bond proposals would be submitted to the voters in the June 5th primary.

College Construction Action Needed

The fate of California's Proposition 3 (to provide college and university construction funds) is still up in the air.

Most of the experts feel a special legislative session to put the college construction bonds on the November ballot will be shortly forthcoming.

Such formidable backers, besides the Brown administration, include GOP gubernatorial nominee, Richard Nixon, and the California Teachers association. The latter group has pledged its "aggressive support" to the new bond proposal.

If the bonds are to be used, they will have to be proposed immediately to allow enough of a campaign to adequately inform the public. There is a great need for something to handle the "crisis" period of college enrollments due by 1965. Two years of delay in providing the classrooms and laboratories essential to educational growth will deprive great numbers of young people of the education for which they are qualified.

Others, however, are showing mixed reaction. Some GOP legislators are against running up any bigger public debt. They are even reported to be working out ways and means of using higher education's present facilities to meet the space needs for the university and colleges, such as initiating a four-quarter college system, rather than voting more bonds this year.

If neither bonds nor revamp use of present facilities is agreed upon, the only alternative is pay-as-you-go. Some feel, of course, that this is the only sensible method. Others feel, with some merit, that the cost of such buildings to be used for the next 50 years should be spread out for as many as possible to bear, not just present taxpayers.

Something will have to be done. An aggressive move in one of the three directions is necessary as soon as possible.

Greeting for Pam

Pamela Gamble of Carmel Valley, newly-named Miss California, gets a homecoming greeting at Monterey Peninsula Airport Saturday from young Kathy Lugo. Pam was flown home from San Francisco aboard a plane provided for her use by the Piper Aircraft Co. Her pilot, shown leaving the plane, was George Rogus. (More pictures on Page Five.)

Dinner Honors Pamela Gamble

Monterey County had dinner with Pam Gamble Saturday night.

More than 200 people turned out at the Mark Thomas Inn to honor the new Miss California from Carmel Valley, and before the evening was over, she had:

The key to the City of Monterey, enough flowers to give the whole state rose fever, two flags, a lifetime membership in the Pacific Grove Boosters and half the proceeds from a cord of wood.

The evening also saw the crowning of a new Miss Monterey County, the lovely Audrey Boutte of Salinas.

Come to the Fair

Aurdey, taking over the crown Pamela abdicated when she won the state title, accepted graciously and invited everyone to the Monterey County Fair.

Pamela, a dark-haired 18-year-old beauty from the University of the Pacific, heard congratulatory telegrams from State Sen. Fred Farr (D-Carmel), Richard Nixon and Gov. Edmund (Pat) Brown.

Miss Gamble also heard a telegram from Robert Burns, president of her university, citing her as "exemplifying the highest and finest qualities of American youth." The telegram was read by Alene Venegas, one of the runners-up in the Miss Monterey County contest.

Legal Leaders Gathering Here

A distinguished group of members of the legal profession and their wives will attend the annual convention of the Uniform Law Commission, which meets in Monterey next week.

All 50 states, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands will be represented, with between 400 and 500 men and women expected.

Convention headquarters will be at the Mark Thomas Inn, where many of the delegates will be staying and where all of the business meetings will be held.

This is the first time in the history of the 70-year-old organization when it has not met at the same time and in the same city as the American Bar Assn.

The group will hold its Armstrong said the conference and its work is recognized throughout the legal profession.

Maximum Efficiency

However, to obtain maximum efficiency, the conference should reach lay organizations which may have problems in areas of law where uniformity is needed.

Armstrong said the conference, now in its 71st year, should be universally recognized as the logical "drafting agency" for all types of laws where uniformity is needed.

Delegates were officially welcomed by Monterey Mayor L. M. (Sparky) Pollard and California Atty. Gen. Stanley Mosk.

Mosk made the point that when the California Constitutional Convention was held in Monterey in 1849, the delegates were hampered by lack of printing facilities.

Times Have Changed

Today, Mosk said, the situation is reversed — so many new laws are being printed from day to day that it is extremely difficult for members of the profession to keep abreast of them.

Mosk commended delegates for doing a "terrific job" in spite of the heavy load.

The conference will continue through Saturday morning.

Recommendations on proposed uniform state laws, which may be passed during the conference, will be submitted to the American Bar Assn. which will convene in San Francisco next week.

The group's function is to attempt to unify laws throughout the country and many of the country's leading jurists will be on hand to address the convention.

A program of entertainment for wives of the delegates has been arranged and in charge is Mrs. Fred Farr, assisted by members of the Lawyers' Wives of Monterey County.

A reception for both delegates and their wives will take place Monday eve-wins the support of the American Bar, it is returned to the conference of uniform law commissioners. The commissioners then are charged with the responsibility for attempting to persuade their state legislatures to adopt the recommendations into law.

Three Each

Each state has three commissioners who are appointed by the governor. State Sen. Fred Farr (D-Carmel) is a California delegate, representing the California State Senate. Representing the California State Assembly is Edwin L. Z'berg of Sacramento.

Each of the 50 states is represented in the current meeting.

Included in the list of well-known persons present are John Bailey of Connecticut, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, and Dean Russell Sullivan of the University of Illinois Law School.

Some of the important laws on which the conference will work will deal with the right to vote in presidential elections; protection of property titles and recognition of foreign judgments.

Louis Kohn of Chicago, head of a committee on the presidential elections matter, today said that an estimated 5 to 8 million lose their right to vote in each presidential election because of moving from one state to another.

His committee is seeking to correct this situation by allowing new residents to vote even though they have been in a state only a very limited period of time. California passed a law in 1959 ning at the Pacific House, with cocktails, a buffet supper and entertainment.

An adobe tour has been arranged by the Monterey History and Art Assn. and wives of delegates will visit the Larkin House, Colton Hall, Casa Amesti and Casa Serrano after attending a luncheon at Neptune's Table on Fishermen's Wharf. Tea will be served at 4 p.m. at Casa Serrano.

That night the group will attend the Wharf Theater production of "The Music Man," starring Jack Kelly.

On Wednesday, wives of delegates will go on a tour to San Simeon and a dinner dance will take place Thursday night at the Beach Club at Pebble Beach, beginning at 7 p.m.

A theater party at California's First Theater on Friday night will wind up the entertainment schedule.

In charge of arranging the adobe tour is Mrs. C. Tod Singleton.

Monterey Conference To Begin

One hundred fifty members of the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws will begin a one-week conference in Monterey Monday.

All the sessions for the 70th annual meeting of the national body will be held at the Mark Thomas Inn.

The commissioners, appointed by the governors of all 50 states, will start the ball rolling for new uniform state laws.

Dignitaries

Representatives at the conference will include the deans of two law schools, several state attorney generals and a number of distinguished judges. John Bailey, chairman of the Democratic National Committee and a commissioner from Connecticut, is expected to be present.

A highlight of the meeting will be Thursday's session to be presided over by State Sen. Fred S. Farr (D-Carmel), who is one of the two legislative commissioners representing California.

Farr said that at Thursday's session the commissioners will take up the right to vote in presidential elections. The senator said that in the 1960 election millions were disenfranchised because they had moved from one state and had not established permanent residency in another.

Voting Rights

The proposed law, which would have to be enacted by the legislative bodies of the 50 states would "save your voting rights as they existed in your old home state."

In its 70-year history over 100 uniform acts have been proposed by the commissioners and many have been enacted. These uniform laws are to untangle legal snarls caused by different laws in

Uniform Voter Law Studied

By EARL HOFELDT

The National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws today in Monterey opened debate on the crucial question of uniform election laws.

The conference is seeking ways of preventing the disenfranchisement of an estimated 5 to 8 million migratory voters in presidential elections.

State Sen. Fred Farr (D-Carmel) presided as discussion chairman at Mark Thomas Inn.

The conference went into its fourth day today. It will conclude on Saturday. Hard-working conferees are tediously assembling recommendations for laws in which they feel uniformity is needed throughout the states.

Not Democratic

As discussion began, Louis A. Kohn, Chicago attorney and chairman of a special committee on uniform election laws, said the disenfranchisement of migratory voters "is certainly contrary to the democratic process."

Remedial action in this field represents the highest type of service which the conference can provide, he added.

The problem is this:

The 50 states have varying residence requirements for voting, ranging from six months to two years.

Because of these requirements, a person moving into a new state often loses his right to vote.

There is no quarrel with residence requirements as they pertain to voting for state and county offices in individual states, since a voter is expected to require time to acquaint himself with candidates and issues in a new state.

However, delegates to the current Monterey conference generally feel it is wrong to deprive such a person of the right to vote for electors for president or vice president.

The subject is fraught with legal complications involving the federal constitution and its relation to the constitutions of the various states.

End Near for Monterey Meeting

On Uniform Law

By EARL HOFELDT

Delegates to the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws today headed into the windup of their week-long meeting in Monterey. Adjournment is scheduled for tomorrow.

As the time for roll-call vote on various bills drew near, attention was still focused on a proposed uniform election code intended to prevent an estimated 5 to 8 million Americans from losing the right to vote in presidential elections.

The election code received extensive debate in sessions yesterday at Mark Thomas Inn. Finally, it was referred back to committee for certain changes. The committee was directed to report to the general assembly again today.

Simplified Rule

A greatly simplified rule affecting migratory voters appeared in the making.

When the proposed uniform election law was presented to the floor yesterday, it contained a provision that a migratory voter should not lose the right to vote for president in a new state if he was qualified to vote in the state of his prior residence.

Many conferees felt that this provision would be unduly burdensome to county clerks, forcing them to determine the voter's eligibility in the other state.

As later amended in committee, this provision was changed to allow the new resident to vote for president if he met all voting requirements of the new state with the exception of residence requirements.

Varying Requirements

The states in the Union now have residence requirements ranging from six months to two years.

There has been strong feeling throughout the U. S. in recent years that no qualified voter should be deprived of the right to vote for president merely because of a change of address.

In Washington, a Senate subcommittee on constitutional amendments has recommended a federal constitutional amendment declaring that no one should lose his right to vote for president if he resides in a new state for at least 90 days.

Delegates to the Monterey conference generally feel that processing of the federal amendment would be too time-consuming. They regard the matter as a responsibility of the various states. By pressing the uniform code through legislatures next year and in '64 they hope to correct the situation by the '64 presidential election.

The national conference on uniform state laws is now in its 71st year. In its work, it looks to the future, seeking to update existing laws and recommending new ones.

Debate this morning was fixed upon a model law for handling property transactions. Property conveyance laws vary greatly from state to state, often to the hardship of buyers.

This afternoon, the conference discussed the important, but highly-technical uniform commercial code. The law would govern interstate commercial transactions. It would affect sales procedures, bank deposits, warehouse receipts, etc.

Eighteen states already have adopted the code. Callifornia is not among them. However, State Sen. Fred Farr (D-Carmel) will attempt to have the State Legislature adopt such a code next year.

Considered yesterday was a proposed uniform "power-of-attorney" law.

It would establish power-of-attorney in cases where a person is not quite incompetent in a legal sense but still lacks the ability to Elsewhere on the conference front, president Walter P. Armstrong of Memphis, Tenn. praised the convention facilities and hospitality of the Monterey Peninsula.

He gave State Sen. Fred Farr (D-Carmel) full credit for bringing the important conference to Monterey. Farr appeared before the conference at its annual meeting last year in St. Louis and persuaded delegates to come to the Peninsula in

Farr Named Chairman Of Judiciary Group

State Sen. Fred S. Farr (D-Carmel) today was appointed chairman of the Senate Judiciary Sub-Committee charged with the investigation of fraudulent charitable fund drives in California.

"While the great majority of charitable fund drives are conducted honestly and provide safeguard to insure that the money raised will be devoted to the object for which it was donated, there are unfortunately, promoters who have bilked the public by soliciting funds which reach the pockets of the promoters and benefit no worthy cause," Farr said.

The sub-committee, appointed by Sen. Edwin Regan, chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, includes Sen. Carl Christensen (D-Eureka), Sen. John Holmdahl (D-Oakland), and Sen.

Ronald Cameron (D-Auburn).

It will hold the first hearing in Los Angeles on Sept. 19 at which time members will solicit the advice of such organizations at the Greater Community Fund of Los Angeles and the Better Business Bureau.

Law enforcement agencies will be asked for their recommendations so the committee can propose legislation to curb the misuse of charitable fund drives in California.

Charitable Fund Drive Investigation Continues

The Senate judiciary subcommittee on charitable fund drives has scheduled a one-day hearing at 2 p.m. Wednesday, Sept. 19, at the Caribe room, Beverly Hilton hotel, Beverly Hills.

Members of the subcommittee include: Senator Fred S. Farr, chairman, and Sens. Ronald G. Cameron (D-Placer, Nevada and Sierra counties), Carl L. Christensen (D-Humboldt county) and John W. Holmdahl (D-Alameda county).

"The Senate standing committee on judiciary," Senator Farr said, "has heard testimony relating to abuses that may have occurred in charitable fund drives in California. While the great majority of drives, we believe, are conducted in an honest and sincere manner, there have been instances reported in which funds solicited may not have properly reached the intended beneficiaries."

The Monterey county legislator said the Committee is aware that this is a subject of importance to both individuals and society. They will have the cooperation of the United States attorney, office of the attorney general, various associations, charitable organizations and other interested persons who are familiar with this subject in attendance at the hearing. The committee will hear testimony relating to recommendations which may result in proposed legislation for protection of the public and legitimate charitable organizations.

Senate Group on Charity Drives Sets Hearing

State Sen. Fred Farr (D-Carmel) and other members of a Senate Judiciary Sub-committee on Charitable Fund Drives will hold a one-day hearing on Wednesday at Beverly Hilton Hotel, Beverly Hills.

"While the great majority of drives, we believe, are conducted in an honest and sincere manner, there have been instances reported in which funds solicited may not have properly reached the intended beneficiaries," he said.

Supervisors Turn Cold Shoulders to Pumas

SALINAS — More letters and personal appeals for removal of Monterey County's bounty on mountain lions were received by the board of supervisors yesterday, but they failed to elicit sympathetic response.

Seven persons, including Margaret Owings of Big Sur and State Sen. Fred Farr of Carmel, pleaded the pumas' case. Letters received now total nine, including a 45-name petition.

Even Peninsula Supervisor Tom Hudson, who previously said he favored removal of the $50 bounty, defended South County Supervisors Frank Echeberria and Harold Henry in their opposition to the move.

"I object to the full burden of the defense being put on Echeberria and Henry," he declared, explaining "I have lions in my own district."

Saw Calf Killed

Hudson said he is a member of the cattlemen's association and saw a calf killed by a lion.

"We should get the viewpoints of the ranchers," he declared, and suggested that Farr should "work with the local cattlemen's and wool growers' associations."

He also suggested "the conservationists and cattle people get together."

Chairman Burt Talcott of Salinas, stating "we need more information," suggested the board await a report from the cattlemen's association and wool growers.

Chester Deaver of Prunedale said he'd "like to have someone explain the benefits received" from the $1,000 now being appropriated in the county budget for lion bounties but "if one calf is saved it may be justification for the money spent."

The board must decide by Aug. 13, date of the final budget hearing, whether to retain the appropriation.

County Counsel William Stoffers also issued a reminder yesterday that elimination of the bounty will necessitate repeal of the ordinance.

Farr, who is chairman of the Senate Fish and Game Committee, promised to introduce legislation in January to remove the state bounty, which he said "serves no useful purpose."

Farr expressed the opinion the same number of lions will be hunted and killed with or without a bounty.

Mrs. Owings told the board "stockmen should realize the value of the lion as a predator to deer."

"Lions prefer venison," she said, adding that "only old lions attack livestock."

Pay Ranchers

Mrs. Owings suggested the county pay ranchers for loss of their cattle to lions and quoted several ranchers who favored removal of the bounty.

Also appearing in behalf of the lions were Elgin Hurlbert of Pacific Grove, president of the Monterey Audubon Society; Harry Dick Ross of Big Sur; John Mortensen of Carmel Valley, and Sherrill Ellsworth of San Benancio.

Letters were received from Mrs. Hans Ewoldsen of Big Sur, Cherrie Child of Carmel, Miss Jane Deremer of Carmel, Marjorie Fontana of Carmel, Frank Lloyd of Carmel, Mary Stewart of Salinas and Harrison Townsend III of Salinas.

Farm Bureau, Cattlemen and Sportsmen Back Lion Bounty

Three new voices today were added to the chorus demanding the retention of county-paid bounties on mountain lions.

It begins to look as if the pro-lion, anti-bounty forces, which got away to a fast start, are sunk.

The Monterey County Cattlemen's association, the Monterey County Farm Bureau and the Southern Monterey County Sportsmen's association all have written letters to the board of supervisors urging that it leave the $50 bounty the county pays on mountain lions alone.

Called "Unreasonable"

"We feel the friends of the mountain lion are being unreasonable in asking for elimination of the bounty," the Cattlemen's association writes. "It is a form of protection for the livestock man which helps guard his livestock from a predator. This is a county service which does a great deal of good and costs the county very little."

The Farm Bureau's board of directors writes it "strongly recommends" that the bounty payment on the mountain lion be continued "as it is a form of protection to the livestock industry."

The Southern Monterey County Sportsmen's association reports that it has passed a resolution recommending the continuation of bounty payments. "Our members believe that the lion population in southern Monterey county has materially increased in the last few years and that lions are a definite menace to livestock in the area irrespective of the amount of damage they may be inflicting on game species."

Earlier the board received a letter from the Central Coast Area Woolgrowers association recommending that it leave the bounty alone.

Lion Called Helpful

Conservationists on the Monterey Peninsula and elsewhere in the county last month launched a drive to get rid of the bounty payment on lions because they feared it was headed for extinction and because the bounty serves no useful purpose. They feel the mountain lion is helpful in controlling the county's surplus deer population and that there is not much evidence to show damage to livestock by the big cats.

The state of California also contributes to the mountain lion bounty, which totals $90 for a male lion and $110 for a female. State Sen. Fred S. Farr (D-Carmel) has said he will introduce legislation to eliminate the state bounty payment.

Two weeks ago supervisors postponed further discussion of the lion bounty until November.

Board Delays Lion Bounty Repeal Plan

The mountain lions lost again, at least temporarily, as Monterey county supervisors voted this morning to delay action for at least two years on a proposal to remove the bounty on the animals.

The continuance was voted at the suggestion of Supervisor Tom Hudson, long identified as a friend of the puma, who noted there were very few facts or figures to show whether lions actually destroy livestock and whether the lion population is dwindling, rising or static. Hudson recommended the county agricultural commissioner contact various sources in the interim to develop these figures.

Pro-bounty forces rolled up big guns for today's hearing on bounty repeal with letters from the Monterey County Cattlemen's association, Southern Monterey County Sportsmen's association, Farm Bureau and Wool Growers' association, all recommending the bounty be kept intact.

In person testimony was offered by lion friends including the Monterey Peninsula Audubon society president who, asking what had happened to request for specific instances of lion damage to livestock, stated flatly, "we have one report that sheep were killed but no verified report that they were killed by lions."

Livestock ranchers have been adamant in their claims that lions do kill livestock and that the bounty is a necessary control on predators. The lion friends claim lions would rather hunt deer and that killing them destroys the balance of nature allowing rodents and other undesirable animals to flourish.

Supervisor Burt Talcott noted one bounty difficulty. "It's no easy job for us supervisors to verify the pelts," he said. "They come into our office with these pelts jumping with fleas and really stinking if the lion's eaten a skunk."

*Let Us Prevent This Wasteland,
Senator Farr*

It is good to see the way the spindly little seedling pines that were planted on Carmel Hill have begun their development into trees. Some died, of course, which was to be expected, some are backward and show little change, but many are doing handsomely, and we give them a cheer.

The planting on the hill is, nevertheless, a disappointment. Since the state's engineers don't like to listen to people who know this forest through which the freeway on the hill passes, it would be a hopeful sign if the Division of Highways engaged a consultant to advise them to correct the serious errors that have been made at high expense.

We nominate Sen. Fred Farr to get this mission accomplished. We have believed that he has sufficient influence to succeed.

New though this planting is, time is running out nevertheless. This is becoming ice-plant hill.

This useful plant is also a pest of the first order. It has been indiscriminately used on Carmel Hill. It is utterly incredible that it should have been planted in the "bowl" at the top of the hill, but there it is, spreading over the flat bottom among the young cypress trees.

It is all over slopes that could fend for themselves if properly planted with materials from the forest. Right next to these ice-plant-covered slopes are natural slopes that had a message for the landscaper, but the message fell on deaf ears.

Also on slopes is the ubiquitous and aggressive genista, which has gone wild in this locality in recent years and then has run wild through its excessive seeding capacity and the exceptional fertility of its seeds.

Between the take-over by this plant and ice-plant, all possibility of native growth to seed itself on the slopes and perpetuate the natural environment will be lost. Great areas will be smothered. And great expense will be incurred by the Division of Highways in keeping the base of the pine trees freed of this voracious, hoglike growth.

On the ocean areas of the 17-Mile Drive the beautiful native wild flowers that once adorned the place are mostly gone or going.

Wherever the ice-plant is introduced, it is a killer. Wherever genista runs wild, it invades and smothers the "live and let live" plants.

Much missed in the planting on the hill are oak trees, that handsomest of local forest bushes, the cascara, and the fine varieties of manzanita that grow in the Del Monte forest.

Nursery cats and dogs that have no relationship to this forest fill in certain large triangles. Some of these plants have "pretty" flowers. This truck should all be returned to Southern California freeways or to places that have no distinctive character such as this wooded region has.

A wasteland is being created on Carmel Hill. And after all the promises that had been made. It will never be corrected, if this community sits back and "takes it."

"Scenic"?*

The Marin County Board of Supervisors held a public hearing last week at Tamalpais High School.

The purpose was to discuss the county's acceptance of plans of the State Division of Highways to convert Highway 1, the coastal highway in Marin County, into a "scenic freeway."

After looking at the Highway Division's freeway construction, we'd say that's a contradiction in terms. We haven't seen any of its freeways that we'd regard as particularly scenic. Possibly a freeway can be scenic. Some of those in the East may come close to being scenic. But we haven't as yet seen such a result produced in California.

Bruce Kilgore of the Sierra Club told the Marin supervisors that no matter what the Division of Highways planned to call their proposed new structure, it would in fact be "a high-speed four-lane road with massive cuts and fills along one of the most scenic coastlines in America."

He added:

"I don't think for a minute that the people of Marin County and their Board of Supervisors can trust the Division of Highways to put a freeway of any type along their unique coastal region, until there is a complete renaissance in the division's thinking."

Here in Monterey County we also have a long stretch of Highway 1 running along the coast. It is even more spectacularly beautiful than Marin County's stretch.

A few years ago the busy bees of the Division of Highways attempted to make this route part of their freeway network.

State Sen. Fred Farr succeeded in having it deleted from the freeway network. Since then there has been a real effort to have it designated as a "scenic highway" and preserved as a beautiful road.

Experience has shown that once the State Highway engineers get their one-track minds on a road for their freeway program, they don't easily give up.

Their plans in Marin County may be an indication that they will be back again to get the coast road south of Carmel into their freeway program.

It may take real vigilance to thwart them. Above all, we must beware of "scenic highway" plans which may amount only to erecting signs saying "This is a scenic highway" — and then going ahead with the full freeway treatment.

Farrs Entertain Former Resident

Houseguests of Sen. and Mrs. Fred Farr in Carmel this past weekend was Mrs. John Abernethy, a member of the Democratic National Committee, who represented that body at the California Democratic meetings at Asilomar.

Mrs. Abernethy was at Asilomar ten years ago, when the CDC was founded. The visitor is a former Carmel resident, her husband having been a student at the Army Language School in 1952. He is now special assistant to G. Mennen Williams, and has spent eight of the 18 months that the Abernethys have made their home in Washington, D. C., in Africa, visiting each country except the Union of South Africa. Mrs. Abernethy, meanwhile, has been busy with her national committee position as assistant to the vice chairman — keeping speaking engagements, organizing women's groups, and planning programs.

Her visit to California was planned to represent the national group at Asilomar, and also to assist in the campaigns of Democratic congressional candidates.

Udall Lauds Parkway Concept

Secretary of the Interior Stewart L. Udall, in a brief stop at Monterey Peninsula Airport Saturday, lauded the "parkway" concept of highway construction.

He also said he wished that more consideration in road construction could be given to the motorist "who is not in a hurry."

Udall, 43, the first Arizonan to serve in the Cabinet, flew into Monterey from Los Banos where he took part in dedication of San Luis damsite. After pausing for lunch and a short interview, he flew to San Francisco.

'Parkway Man'

On the subject of road construction, he said:

"I am a parkway man. My department has primary responsibility for parks and conservation, particularly.

"I think that we need a first rate, high-speed highway system. I also think we will get it. But I also think it would be wise if we can build highways where they do a minimum of damage to scenic values.

"I think what the country really needs is something for the one person who seems to be left out. He is the motorist who is not in a hurry and wants to stop and see a little scenery and history.

"I wish more of the people could see the Blue Ridge Parkway in Virginia and North Carolina. We need more of this sort of thing in California rather than putting super-highways in the wrong places."

State Sen. Fred Farr (D-Carmel) and State Sen. Richard Richards of Los Angeles, Democratic candidate for U.S. Senate, accompanied Udall on the hop from Los Banos.

A Monterey Bay University

Chancellor Dean E. McHenry of the new campus of the University of California at Santa Cruz outlined some plans yesterday to a group of men here prominently identified with higher education.

He made an important proposal—that all institutions of higher learning in the Monterey Bay area join with the new branch of the University in an association which would involve exchanges of facilities and personnel and the establishment of educational television.

Chancellor McHenry spoke at a luncheon at the Army Language School.

Among those present were Adm. Marshall E. Dornin, Capt. Merle F. Bowman and Dean Allen Edgar Vivell of the Navy School; Col. Richard J. Long and Maj. Peter Kim of the Army Language School; Rip Matteson of Monterey Peninsula College, Adm. Raymond A. Spruance, Adm. Charles D. Wheelock, Dr. Remsen Bird, Dr. Morse A. Cartwright, Dr. Henry Houghton, Sen. Fred Farr, Will Shaw and Gerald Keith.

A discussion led to the naming of Dr. Bird as chairman and of Adm. Spruance as honorary chairman of a committee to see what could be done to implement Dr. McHenry's proposals.

The chancellor said that his directives were to plan for an institution of 27,500 students on the 2,000-acre Santa Cruz campus. This would be equal to the Berkeley and Los Angeles enrollments.

But the new branch of the university will open in September, 1965, on a much smaller scale—500 students. Plans call for reaching an enrollment of 7,500 by 1975. He said that he and others planning the Santa Cruz institution hoped the huge envisaged total never would be reached.

State Calls Regional Recreation Meeting

A summit conference to determine the future of Monterey County's recreational resources will be held on the Peninsula next spring.

The State Recreation Commission today voted to hold the meeting. Invited will be federal, state and local governmental representatives, as well as land owners and interested parties.

Representatives from surrounding counties also will attend the conference, which will probably be held in March. The commission said it will invite Santa Cruz, San Luis Obispo, Santa Barbara and San Benito counties.

Farr's Idea

Elmer Aldrich, chief of the State Division of Recreation, said this morning at the meeting in the Monterey Public Library that the conference was suggested by State Sen. Fred Farr (D-Carmel).

Aldrich said Farr told him he was concerned about the future of the coastline in Monterey and San Luis Obispo counties, and concerned also about the lack of coordinated planning.

The conference could have some far-reaching effects in Monterey County.

Scenic Routes

Aldrich said he felt that circulation patterns of the county's highways should be discussed, and that possible recommendations for the designation of scenic routes could be made. This could apply to the Monterey-Salinas highway as well as the Coast Highway, he said.

"This conference is not just to stimulate interest," he said. "We want to identify the hot problems, bring together elements of controversy and get specific recommendations."

Aldrich said he felt there should be emphasis on the preservation of untouched areas along the coast, saying that Monterey and San Luis Obispo counties were "recreation reservoirs."

Out-of-towners

Surveys show, he said, that most of the out-of-county recreation crowds come to those two counties from Los Angeles, while San Francisco uses Santa Cruz and San Benito counties.

Bearing this out, Mel Bakeman, Monterey County planning assistant, said that 5,000 boats were on the Nacimiento Reservoir on Labor Day, and that 46 per cent were from Los Angeles.

Aldrich said that another recommendation which could come out of the conference would be that Monterey County set up a county recreation commission. Aldrich said that this has been suggested for other counties by the state. Twenty-six counties in the state have such commissions.

The Monterey County conference will be a pilot talk, Aldrich, for 15 projected conferences to be held throughout the state.

The commission designated Nicholas Roosevelt of Big Sur, a commission member, to work with local governmental agencies and interests in setting up the conference. No date or site was set.

County to Urge Scenic Highways

SALINAS — Monterey County, cradle of the scenic highway concept in California, will speak with a loud voice at Tuesday's state sponsored scenic highway conference in San Luis Obispo.

A large delegation of county residents is expected to attend, including Burt Talcott, chairman of the board of supervisors, and State Sen. Fred Farr of Carmel.

Talcott is scheduled to present Monterey County's views on development of a scenic highway system, while Farr, a pioneer in the effort to set up the statewide program, will speak on general background.

The meeting, one of 13 being held throughout the state, is scheduled for 10 a.m. in the city hall. Monterey County's presentation is set for 10:30 a.m.

Coordinated

Sixteen citizens and officials gathered at the courthouse yesterday at Farr's invitation to discuss and coordinate the county's presentation.

It was agreed the county will ask the state to expand the scenic highway concept to include county roads as well as state highways in any system which may be established.

Also to be proposed is the designation of corridors through which scenic highways pass as "scenic conservation districts."

This will mean establishment of controls over access, architecture building sites and landscaping within the corridor, it is pointed out in the written presentation to be made by Talcott.

Mayor L. M. (Sparky) Pollard of Monterey said the state "should call in a landscape architect before a freeway is designed."

Not Experts

"We may not know what we want to preserve—we're not experts," Pollard pointed out, adding that "damage has been done in lots of places, particularly on top of Carmel Hill."

County Planning Director Ed DeMars said "the division of highways is becoming more and more aware of this problem."

Gordon Reid, past president of the Monterey Peninsula Chamber of Commerce, cited the proposed Monterey freeway as an example of what happens "when a route is selected without regard for historic and scenic factors."

Pollard declared, "If Monterey is made to look like Hayward, there's no point in Monterey existing, is there?"

County Road Commissioner Bruce McClain, at whom Pollard was looking, conceded, "You've got a point there."

State Proposals

The state has already proposed for inclusion in its scenic system Highway 1 for the entire length of Monterey County; Lonoak and Peachtree roads from the San Benito County line to the Mustang grade in southern Monterey County; and Mustang grade eastward.

Monterey County will propose inclusion of the Monterey-Salinas highway from Monterey to the Hilltown Bridge, the Carmel-Pacific Grove highway, Highway 101 from San Benito County to its intersection with Highway 156 at Prunedale, and Highway 156 from Highway 101 to its juncture with Highway 1.

Talcott's presentation will point out that "Monterey County has long believed in the blending of landscape and roadway for proper scenic control, as has been evidenced by numerous past planning actions along this line which precede this report by as long as 30 years."

First Effort

"The introduction of architectural control along Highway 1 and later along the Salinas - Monterey highway was the first known effort of this type to make development harmonize with the surrounding terrain opened up by scenic road construction" the state officials will be told.

To further document its pioneering claim, the county will cite its adoption in 1942 of a park and recreation plan recommending a system of parkways linking beaches and proposed inland parks, its adoption in 1953 of litterbug control, billboard regulation in 1955, and appointment of the Open Space Advisory Committee as a result of state scenic easement legislation in 1959 which originated in Monterey County.

Farr Pioneers

Monterey County's Sen. Farr has pioneered resolutions in the State Senate which have led to the setting up of study committees, and he has announced his intention of introducing scenic highway legislation next year.

Others present at yesterday's coordinating session conducted by Farr were:

Keith Evans, Carmel representative on the County Planning Commission; Adm. C. W. Fisher (USN ret) representing the Carmel Citizens Committee; Chester Coulter representing the CORE committee of the Monterey Peninsula Area Planning Commission; and Gordon Forrest, city manager of Seaside.

Other representatives were present from Gonzales, Greenfield, the Greenfield Chamber of Commerce and the Salinas Chamber of Commerce.

County Groups Ask Scenic Highways

By EVERETT MESICK

SAN LUIS OBISPO—Four speakers from Monterey County presented ideas on development of a state scenic highway system to a state-sponsored workshop here today.

They were backed up by 11 other Monterey County citizens and officials who attended the four-county regional conference—one of 13 being held throughout the state.

Other counties represented were San Luis Obispo, San Benito, and Santa Barbara. The workshops, hosted by the State Division of Highways, are designed to gather information for use by the State Legislature in drafting a scenic highway bill next year.

Speakers

Speakers were State Sen. Fred Farr (D-Carmel) a pioneer in scenic highway work Burt Talcott, chairman of the Monterey County Board of Supervisors; Adm. C. W. Fisher, (USN ret), president of the Carmel Citizens Committee; and Francis Whitaker, Carmel City councilman.

Farr told the gathering that "Monterey County deserves credit for interest shown and for sparking the program from the outset."

He stressed that the state will need the full cooperation of the counties in controlling the corridors through which the scenic highways will travel.

He said the counties should take inventory of their roads with the view to future inclusions in the scenic highway system.

Takes Issue

Fisher said: "We take issue with anything that subordinates the scenic issue to any other consideration."

He suggested changes in the wording of the state's preliminary plan released earlier this year.

Fisher proposed addition of the following roads to those already suggested inclusion in the scenic system: the Monterey - Salinas highway, Carmel - Pacific Grove highway, Carmel Valley road, Los Laureles grade, and "all roads on the Monterey Peninsula, state or county."

The state has already proposed designating as scenic highways State Highway 1 for the entire length of the county, Lonoak, and Peachtree roads from the San Benito County line to the Mustang grade in southern Monterey County, and Mustang grade eastward.

Endorsements

Fisher said his proposals had been endorsed by the Carmel Citizen's Committee and the Monterey Peninsula Parkway Committee

Talcott read a prepared statement containing the official position of the County of Monterey as endorsed by the board of supervisors and County Planning Commission.

Suggested for inclusion were the Monterey-Salinas highway, Carmel-Pacific Grove highway, Highway 101 from San Benito County line to its intersection with Highway 156; Highway 156 from Highway 101 to Highway 1; and Highway 120 from Soledad to the Pinnacles.

The county also asked the state to expand the scenic highway concept to include county roads as well as state highways and asked that the corridors through which the scenic highways would pass be designated as "scenic conservation districts."

Carmel Resolution

Whitaker presented a resolution adopted by the Carmel City Council asking that the Monterey-Salinas highway and Carmel - Pacific Grove highway be included in the scenic system.

He said the resolution had been endorsed by the Monterey Peninsula Area Commission and the Point Lobos League.

Also present for Monterey County were County Planning Director Ed DeMars, County Road Commissioner Bruce McClain, Monterey Mayor L. M. (Sparky) Pollard, County Planning Commissioners Charlotte Wilbur, Harriet Gordon, Floyd Grigory; Chester Coulter, representing the Core Committee of the Monterey Peninsula Area Planning Commission; Gordon Reid, of the Monterey Parkway Committee, Wallace Holme of the Monterey Chapter of American Institute of Architects; Francis Paul of the Alisal Chamber of Commerce; and John Davis, mayor of King City.

Assemblyman James Holmes (R-Santa Barbara) congratulated Sen. Farr on his "foresightedness" in putting through a resolution last year that precipitated the present investigative program.

Conducting the meeting was E. R. Foley, district engineer of District 5 of the State Division of Highways.

County Meet On Scenic Roads Asked

State Sen. Fred Farr (D-Carmel) today asked supervisors to meet with him Oct. 4 to develop ideas on scenic highways before the Oct. 9 statewide conference in San Luis Obispo.

In a letter to the board, Farr said mayors of all cities in the county and other interested people will also be invited.

The San Luis Obispo conference has been called to discuss state highway routes to be included in a statewide scenic highway program.

Farr said he thought it was best to present a united front at the meeting, and was calling the preliminary meeting for this purpose.

"Extremely sensitive and intelligent treatment of high priority scenic areas such as we have in our county is essential," Farr said, "both in the original highway construction, and on those existing state highways which are forced to bear vastly increased traffic loads."

Farr Urges State-Local Planning

State Sen. Fred Farr (D-Carmel) told Carmel Valley Kiwanians Tuesday that the scenic highway concept requires coordinated planning by state and local governments.

Speaking at the noon meeting at Los Laureles Lodge, Farr said local groups must make their views known to the state planning office and the division of highways to insure preservation of scenic routes.

"The scenic highway program to succeed will need the utmost cooperation between state and local governments," he said.

State's Duty

Outlining the responsibilities of each group, Farr said it will be the state's duty to assure the selection of an attractive route through scenic areas and to design a highway that causes the least possible destruction. The highway, wherever possible, should complement the scenic area, he said.

The local government, he continued, is responsible through planning and set-backs for controlling the scenic corridor.

Farr said that unsightly "strip developments" should be prevented.

"Too many areas which were a delight to the motorist have been blighted by a seemingly never-ending succession of hamburger stands thrown up without the slightest regard for the views they obliterate," he said.

Urges Beauty

Farr said that although freeways are sometimes inevitable, they needn't be unsightly.

He said he strongly endorsed a suggestion by Monterey Mayor L. M. Pollard made at a recent conference in San Luis Obispo. Pollard proposed that the State Highway Commission seek the advice of a landscape architect before, not after, a freeway route is selected.

"That way," Farr said, "a determination could be made as to what features of a proposed route ought to be preserved as part of the scenic corridor."

Senator Farr Praises CV Road Concept

"Outdoor Recreation and Scenic Highways in California" was the topic when Senator Fred Farr addressed the Carmel Valley Kiwanis Club at its regular weekly luncheon meeting last Tuesday at Los Laureles Lodge. While on the subject, he gave an approving nod to the idea for Carmel Valley Rd. suggested by Donald Goodhue and Gordon Hall of the Monterey Peninsula Area Planning Commission (the OUTLOOK, Sept. 20).

A recent investigation by a senate committee showed, Senator Farr stated, that the most popular form of recreation in this state is leisure driving; second most popular is walking. He used this fact as evidence for his belief that outdoor recreation and scenic highways will become increasingly important in California as the population continues to grow (at the rate of one-half million people per year.)

Senator Farr stressed that highways through scenic portions of the state should be planned to be as attractive as possible, and stated that the principles forwarded by Hall and Goodhue for Carmel Valley Rd. were local applications of sound principles for scenic highways everywhere.

(These principles include preservation of natural features wherever possible, often through separation of opposite-bound lanes of traffic by wide scenic dividers; screening of homes from view through use of wide setbacks, and cul-de-sacs instead of a "ribbon type" road development.)

Senator Farr cited the "Prunedale cut-off" as one good example of this type of road.

"People complain about 'too much government'," he declared, "but it takes governmental organization to provide the planning and administration which make such things as scenic highways possible to all of us."

He stressed also that co-operation between various levels of government is necessary to effect scenic highways.

Way Cleared For State Aid To County Dam

SAN DIEGO — The California Water Commission meeting here yesterday, praised plans for the San Antonio Dam project in southern Monterey County and said its formal approval is not needed for a grant of $3,795,000 in state funds for recreational facilities.

State Sen. Fred Farr (D-Carmel), reporting on the meeting which he attended, said this clears the way now for receipt of the state money. The funds were granted under a bill put through the State Legislature by Farr and Assemblyman Alan Pattee (R-Corral de Tierra) last year.

A $12 million bond issue is proposed in the Monterey County Flood Control and Water Conservation District in the Salinas Valley to finance the dam.

The principal purpose of the dam will be to provide additional irrigation water for the Salinas Valley. But extensive recreational development of the lake also is planned, and the $3,795,000 in state money will be used for this phase of the project.

Present to represent the county at the water commission's meeting were Farr; Chester Deaver, county supervisor and chairman of the flood control district; Arnold Frew of King City, former chairman of the State Water Commission and now chairman of the county advisory committee to the district; Loren Bunte, district engineer; and his assistant, Kent Leemie.

Something New . . . Have a copy of a letter from Fred Farr to Edward Dolder, the chief of the State Division of Beaches and Parks.

Fred says he is writing on behalf of a senior citizen's group in Monterey, spearheaded by John Crivello.

John asks that space be set aside in the Custom House Plaza for several bocci ball courts.

Fred says he thinks that this is an "ideal activity" to be carried on at the Custom House Plaza, inasmuch as the plaza is adjacent to Fishermen's Wharf; and a game of bocci ball is a very colorful one, which would attract many visitors.

"I know that the senior citizen's group would keep the area clean and well policed and it would be no problem to the local police department," Fred says.

Fred says with attractive benches, this would be a fine tourist attraction.

Well, I do know that Joe DiMaggio started that way.

Political Truce Irks Democrats

The long-standing political truce between State Sen. Fred Farr (D-Carmel) and Assemblyman Alan G. Pattee (R-Corral de Tierra) once more is vexing Monterey County Democrats.

It would be vexing Republicans too except for the fact that Farr does not have to stand election this year. Pattee does — and because of the so-called "truce," Farr has not come out in support of Pattee's Democratic opponent, Elvin Anderson of Monterey.

Many local members of both parties feel the truce is "nonsense," that Farr should not be reluctant to back a Democrat for Assembly and that Pattee should not withhold support for a Republican for State Senate. On this line, it has been reported that Democrats hope to put Farr on the spot by asking him to be master of ceremonies at an Anderson rally on Oct. 27 at Monterey County Fairgrounds.

Meanwhile, Democratic leader Saul M. Weingarten advises us that he understands that Farr is about to come out strongly in support of Stewart for Congress.

Farr Explains No Stand on Assembly

State Sen. Fred Farr (D-Carmel), in a letter to The Herald, states his reasons for not taking a stand between Democrat Elvin Anderson and Republican incumbent Alan G. Pattee in the race for Assembly in the 34th District.

"I wish to again reiterate that during the 7½ years that I have served in the Senate, I have not participated in the Assembly campaigns.

"I do not intend to do so now, nor do I know of any incumbent legislators in Sacramento who campaign against their colleagues. Persons experienced in politics understand this political fact of life. This is not a question of party loyalty or non-loyalty.

"Mr. Anderson is a hard-working Democrat. He has campaigned vigorously throughout the new 34th Assembly District and is qualified to serve in the legislature.

"I believe that the governor and other Democratic candidates deserve the support not only of our party but that of Californians everywhere."

Farr, meanwhile has agreed to serve as master of ceremonies at a rally at the Fairgrounds Saturday night. Originally, it was set up as a rally for Anderson. It then was doubtful if Farr would accept the MC assignment. But since the rally now has been expanded to include a boost for congressional candidate William K. Stewart and the Democratic ticket as a whole, it is okay with Farr.

Backers of GOP congressional candidate Burt L. Talcott of Salinas are rejoicing over an article in the Wall Street Journal of last Friday. The article states:

"Disappointing candidates irk Democratic chiefs. The party already writes off some 1962 fresh faces as amateurish nonentities. Given no chance of victory despite Democratic redistricting are three California congressional hopefuls: William Stewart (Talcott's opponent), William Keller and Edward Roybal."

Stewart's camp is jumping too, but not with joy. Members are upset because some one removed three of Stewart's campaign signs over the weekend. Two were taken from the Salinas highway, a third from the Capri Club in Seaside. All were 4-foot-by-4-foot signs, made of light plywood.

The Stewart people also report that Vice President Lyndon B. Johnson did endorse Stewart when Johnson was in San Jose earlier this month. They feel that Talcott has given a contrary implication in Talcott's statement that Johnson refused to appear in Monterey County because he did not want to be associated with Stewart's views.

Monterey Democratic headquarters is now open at 289 Alvarado St. from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. and from 7 to 9 p.m. The phone is FR 5-4062. Anyone wishing information or wanting to volunteer his services to the headquarters is urged to contact the office.

Monterey County Sheriff Victor Tibbs is among 30 of California's 58 county sheriffs who this week expressed support of the law enforcement policies of Gov. Edmund G. Brown.

Democrats Plan Rally For Stewart, Anderson

A Democratic rally and jamboree will be held Saturday night at Monterey County Fairgrounds.

It is intended to focus attention upon congressional candidate William K. Stewart, Assembly candidate Elvin Anderson and the state Democratic ticket.

The affair will open with a social hour from 6:30 to 7:30, to be followed with a spaghetti feed. Price for the dinner is $1.50 per plate. Family attendance is encouraged.

Featured speaker of the evening will be Al Gruen, president of the California AFL-CIO, who will urge Democrats to turn out the vote on Nov. 6.

Salinas attorney Sanford H. Bolz will make a short talk on behalf of Gov. Edmund G. Brown.

State Sen. Fred Farr of Carmel will be master of ceremonies.

There will be music and entertainment. Persons wishing reservations may phone FR 5-1748 or MA 4-2554.

The rally committee is headed by Mrs. Florence Viall, chairman; Mrs. Marje Kamp, ticket chairman; Mrs. Thomas Oberbeck, in charge of cakes; Mrs. Gloria Dudley, reservations; Mrs. Elvin Anderson, entertainment and Mrs. Jean McKinstor, hospitality.

VOTE NO on Proposition 24

Farr Opposes State Senate Reapportionment

SALINAS—State Sen. Fred Farr (D-Carmel) has urged the board of supervisors to oppose the State Senate reapportionment proposal on the Nov. 6 ballot.

In a letter to Chairman Burt Talcott, Farr states "The interest and support of public bodies and organizations in our county in opposition to Prop. 23—the so-called Bonelli Reapportionment Plan—is urgent."

"If adopted, this constitutional amendment would be detrimental to Monterey County as well as to many other Northern California counties," Farr wrote, explaining "It would not only eliminate State Reapportionment powers over the Senate after 1964 but would throw redistricting into confusion and conflict."

Resolution

He asks the board to pass a resolution opposing the proposition. The request is scheduled for consideration at next Monday's meeting.

Farr blasts the proposal as "a carelessly drafted scheme which can only result in a massive alteration of political power in California."

He points out that provisions call for an increase in Senate membership from the present 40 to 50, "thus weakening Monterey County's vote."

Five of the new seats would be given to Los Angeles County and one each to Orange, San Diego, San Francisco, Alameda and Santa Clara counties.

Farr emphasizes "This would mean seven additional senators for Southern California, which already dominates the 80-member Assembly."

Council Votes Opposition To Prop. 23

The Monterey City Council last night passed a resolution opposing the Senate reapportionment proposition (Proposition 23) on the Nov. 6 ballot.

The measure, if passed, would add 10 senators to the State Senate — seven of the new senators to be added in Southern California. State Sen. Fred Farr (D-Carmel) and many other Northern California senators are opposing the bill.

The council's vote was unanimous.

Mayor L. M. (Sparky) Pollard then criticized the previous city council for supporting the $1.75 billion state water program in the 1960 election. "All of this water was allocated to Southern California," Pollard said. "The voters of Northern California should be on the alert."

Letter to Board

Sen. Farr Opposes Prop. 23

Monterey county's State Senator, Fred S. Farr (D-Carmel) today urged the board of supervisors to pass a resolution opposing Proposition 23, the so-called "Bonelli reapportionment plan."

Sen. Farr, in a letter written to the board, said "if adopted, this constitutional amendment would be detrimental to Monterey county, as well as many other Northern California counties, for it would not only eliminate the state reapportionment commission powers over the Senate after 1964, but would throw redistricting into confusion and conflict."

The proposition, which will be on the November ballot, calls for increasing the state Senate's membership from 40 to 50, giving five additional seats to Los Angeles county and one each to Orange, San Diego, San Francisco, Alameda and Santa Clara counties.

Senator Farr called proposition 23 "a carelessly drafted scheme which can only result in a massive alteration of political power in California." He pointed out that California has now a system of legislative checks and balances, wherein southern California dominates the Assembly and northern California the legislature. Passage of proposition 23 would shift a great weight of political power to the south.

Senator Farr was also distressed that the proposition causes the state's reapportionment commission to lose jurisdiction in Senate reapportionment after 1964. He says the present commission — Lt. Governor, Attorney General, State Controller, Secretary of State, Supt. of Public Instruction — is necessary in that it must reapportion the legislature after each census — if the legislature fails to reapportion itself.

Legislators' Pay Editor, The Herald:

I have never been a very influential yokel, but I am asking you to reverse your stand on Propositions 1 and 17.

I have just experienced my first effort in entering the political arena due to Mr. Glenn Coolidge's death. I was motivated to offer my services as a Republican candidate by the fact that I believed my philosophy was different from the Democratic candidate.

I did not know what a congressman's salary was. I only know I was prepared to make a personal sacrifice to serve in a different capacity than my present one.

The realization has hit home that a man with any sense of devotion to public duty must be reimbursed sufficiently well for him to dedicate his capabilities without looking for a handout.

Contrary to many assertions, very few men are dedicated to saving money rather than spending. It is imperative that thrift should be basic with any public official.

So don't count on me to run for any office when it doesn't pay enough to protect my family, other dependents or obligations that must be met.

The many hours serving the people, meeting with them, researching the laws and the greatest of all personal sacrifices of no longer having privacy but belonging to the people warrants support of Prop. 1 and 17.

JOSEPH NOTO, DDS, Monterey.

Editor's Note: The Herald considers all propositions carefully before taking a stand, but once having taken a stand, does not reverse itself.

Propositions 1 and 17 are conflicting propositions. No. 1 increases legislators' pay from $6,000 a year to $11,250 a year, but attempts to conceal the amount from the voters by devious language.

No. 10 limits the salary increase to $10,000 but adds to legislators' pensions. It was put on the ballot by five outgoing senators, including Richard Richards of Los Angeles, in an obvious effort to feather their nests at the taxpayers' expense.

California legislators draw an average of over $11,000 a year in salaries and expenses, in addition to many emoluments in Sacramento, for their part-time jobs. This is more than in any other state.

We agree that there are able men in our legislature and we'd put Sen. Fred Farr and Assemblyman Alan Pattee among them. We agree that legislators ought to be adequately paid.

We would go along with a pay increase for them on the following conditions: (a) a single proposition, instead of two conflicting propositions were offered; (b) the proposition were written in straightforward, and not tricky, language, and (c) the increase asked was reasonable — say to $8,000, which would be a 33 1/3 per cent jump, or even to $9,000, which would be a 50 per cent jump. But we can't go for Propositions 1 or 17.

Politicians Explain 10/23/62 Affiliation

Two completely different approaches to the subject "Why I Am a Member of My Political Party" were taken by speakers at Thursday's meeting of the Monterey Peninsula League.

Assemblyman Alan Pattee took the philosophical approach to explain his membership in the Republican Party, and State Senator Fred Farr presented concrete examples of things that have been or are being done by the administrations in Washington and Sacramento, both of which are Democratic.

"The first premise of the Republican party is that the government should do for people only what they cannot do themselves," said Mr. Pattee, who was the first speaker.

Crisis to Affect Ca Predictions on Cou

Frank Reiser, who is chairman of Richard M. Nixon's campaign on the Monterey Peninsula, came into The Herald the other day to predict the outcome of the Nixon-Pat Brown race in Monterey County.

Nixon, he said, will carry Monterey County by 12,000 votes. And, of course, Reiser feels Nixon will take the state as well.

In 1960, Nixon carried Monterey County by 7,800 votes against John F. Kennedy in the presidential election. Reiser said he feels that Nixon will better his 1960 county margin for a number of reasons but a key one is that Brown's popularity "is not quite that of the President."

To be fair, we also called State Sen. Fred Farr of Carmel who is chairman of Brown's campaign in Monterey County. Farr said he wouldn't discuss figures. His comment: "Pat Brown will carry the state. There's no question of that. And Monterey County will close."

Demos Told To Get Out Vote Nov. 6

MONTEREY—County Democrats Saturday night were urged to "get out the vote" on Nov. 6.

Al Gruen, president of the California AFL-CIO, speaker at the party's pre-election jamboree, told a gathering of nearly 200 at the county fairgrounds to seek a big turnout on election day.

He urged greater participation in politics and made it clear he felt that labor generally favors the Democratic candidates, several of whom were introduced.

They were Congress candidate William K. Stewart of Pacific Grove and Assembly nominee Elvin Anderson of Monterey.

State Sen. Fred Farr (D-Carmel) emceed the event. Gruen was introduced by John Matto of Salinas, representing labor groups.

Copies of a Presidential letter to Stewart, written on behalf of his Congressional candidacy, were distributed during the jamboree which was highlighted by a spaghetti dinner.

A Lamb At School, But Not Mary's

This is the story of a lamb and a little red school house, but not the one with Mary as heroine. It is rather a Carmel version of the plot, and it involves thwarted hopes, rising costs, unresolved problems and, yes, even sex.

Also, it has a much larger cast of characters, including 29 Carmel youngsters and Senator Fred S. Farr.

But to get to the beginning, Senator Farr bought the lamb this summer at the fair. As a friendly, nonpolitical gesture, he presented it to the youngsters of the Carmel Co-op Nursery which meets in the little red Bay School house but was not at the time in session.

When fall came along and school began, there was still no place to confine a lively lamb there. It was only recently, after a group of co-op fathers constructed a sheepfold beside the playground, that the lamb could be brought to his new home and rightful owners, all 29 of them.

Meanwhile, with the passage of so much time, the lamb was nibbling through stacks and stacks of expensive alfalfa and whatever else it takes to keep a lamb happy, and he was, of course, growing. His appearance at the school brought comments from by-standing adults such as: "That's no lamb; that's a ram." And, "Take down those fences, pardner. This is cattle country!"

Now a new quandary arose. Co-op mothers, wanting to make the most of opportunity, had planned to somehow acquire a ewe lamb too and, in a minor way, go into the sheep business. But suddenly no one knew, or could discern in any way, whether the lamb is a breeding-type sheep or a meat-type sheep.

If it is a castrated animal, it is already well past its prime, since it is now over six months old, and therefore no longer good shishkabob by butchers' standards, hence costing the co-op quite a bit of cash, at least on paper. And if it is a ram, then it should be presented with a mate (more money) very soon.

Senator Farr himself has offered no enlightenment whatever in this matter.

But the tide of opinion among the mothers now seems to be that the lamb is not a ram after all.

Plans for having the children name their pet also had to be sacked when it was discovered the group was about to emerge with 29 different names, each receiving one vote each. (In a burst of combined egotism, each youngster wanted the lamb named after himself.)

On the bright side of this affair, which has already cost the organization more than $100 for the sheep corral alone, not counting the cost of beer consumed by the volunteer working fathers, it is obvious that all the children love the lamb extravagantly. They especially enjoy feeding it up to its woolly ears with the alfalfa and other stuff for which their parents are generously bearing the cost.

And come next spring, no matter what the wether (sorry, but it just crept in), the cooperative pet will be shorn of his coat in plain sight of 58 watchful and loving eyes.

South Coast Plan Approved

By EVERETT MESICK
SALINAS — A blueprint for preserving the beauty of Monterey County's scenic coast was born yesterday.

It won 4-1 approval from the board of supervisors at the end of a three-hour public hearing before a capacity crowd of 125.

Five years in the making, the plan will guide development of the 72 miles of coastline between Carmel Highlands and the south county line.

Its adoption had long been urged by scenic conservationists to keep the rugged stretch of shoreline from spoiled by the encroaching touch of civilization.

The sole negative vote was cast by Supervisor Frank Echeberria, in whose district the southern part of the plan area lies. He expressed the fear that property owners there would suffer from the controls to be imposed.

Implementation of these controls awaits the adoption of a precise zoning map, on which the planning department will begin work soon.

Key features are the banning of construction within 100 feet of both sides of Highway 1 throughout the area and the prohibition against heavy population development in the southern section.

Property owners in the southern area fought the plan fiercely because of these restrictions but it was generally approved by property owners in the northern area.

It was emphasized by the planning department that variations will be allowed wherever hardship would result from the literal application of the restrictions.

Peninsula Supervisor Tom Hudson, who moved for adoption, told the apprehensive property owners they were assured "ample protection by the last record of this board."

Proponents

San Francisco attorney Ben Parkinson, whose firm prepared a legal opinion defending the plan as constitutional, told the board it must act to prevent the coastline from going the way of the south shore of Lake Tahoe.

He lauded State Sen. Fred Farr (D-Carmel) and "other members of the state government" for frustrating plans to convert Highway 1 into a freeway.

Farr, speaking both as a senator and as president of the Big Creek Corp., said "What you do here today will attract the attention of people all over the country."

He added, "It will be a considerable setback to the whole scenic highway program in the state if this plan is not passed here where the scenic movement began."

Nathaniel Owings of Big Sur, author of an earlier plan which provided the foundation for the present one, urged the board to "give Monterey County the dignity of a master plan in place of this chaos."

Speaking against the plan were Lewis Fenton, representing Charles Fuller, owner of 200 acres near Big Sur; Paul Hamerly, representing property owners John Doud, C. T. Hill and Lawrence Anderson; Mrs. Virginia Nielson, Carmel Highlands realtor; and San Francisco attorney Mary Kester, author of a memorandum attacking the plan on constitutional grounds.

Mrs. Kester said she represented 15 owners of land totaling 7,786 acres, banded together as the Coast Citizens Committee.

Letters, cards and telegrams were received from 79 persons favoring the plan and 45 opposing it.

County Counsel William Stoffers said the plan had been the subject of more legal research than any matter ever to come before the board.

Although he had "serious doubts" as to its constitutionality when presented in its original form, he has none now, he said.

Planning Director Ed DeMars listed the following reasons for allowing greater population density in the north than in the south:

1—By controlling population expansion southward, Highway 1 can be kept a two-lane road.

2—The northern area has water lines and other utilities, which the southern area does not.

3—The terrain in the south is steeper.

He pointed out that "we will have to hold public hearings on precise zoning" and that individual hardships can be brought up at that time.

He added that variances can also be obtained from the Board of Zoning Adjustment after the precise zoning is implemented.

Population densities are established as follows:

1—Malpas Creek to Soberanes Point, one living unit for each 2½ acres, except that one unit for each 2 acres will be allowed on the Victorine Ranch.

2—Soberanes Point to Rocky Creek, one unit for each 2½ acres west of the highway and one for each 5 acres east of the highway.

3—Rocky Creek to the south county line, 5 acres west of the highway and 10 acres east of the highway, except in the Big Sur Valley where one unit per half acre will be allowed from the River Inn to the Coastlands for motels, trailer courts and camps.

Supervisor Race

Woman Is Endorsed For Office

By Eric Brazil

Monterey County's Central Labor council last night endorsed Mrs. Helen Hardeman to succeed Congressman-elect Burt L. Talcott on the board of supervisors.

Mrs. Hardeman, who is field representative for the United Packinghouse Food and Allied Workers (AFL-CIO), local 78, secured, in effect, the endorsement of the preponderance of organized labor for the second supervisorial district seat. Seventeen of the council's 24 members attended the meeting.

An informed source told the Californian today that no other potential candidate for the soon-to-be-vacant position gained serious consideration at the meeting.

"Very Happy"

Mrs. Hardeman acknowledged getting the endorsement and said she was "very happy" to have it. She is a committee including Carr of the Retail Clerks, Irene Johnson of UPWA local 78, Joe Miller of the Plumbers and Johnny Mattos of the Laborers and Hod for 20 years before moving Salinas, says he'd like to have the position. Others who said they're interested in the job are educators Winst Nelson and Lorenz Newton, insurance man Xum Speeg, Atty. Robert Tuttle and L. Stewart and Fort Ord munition depot warehouseman Harry Nicklas.

Salinas Mayor Arthur Atteridge, perhaps the most frequently mentioned of all potential candidates, has said he won't seek the job, but he doesn't go so far as to say he'll turn it down if offered.

The Alisal Democratic club's meeting tonight at 7:30 o'clock at Fremont school could turn out to be a political free-for-all in the event the club decides to consider making an endorsement for the supervisorial position. Mrs. Hardeman says she'll be there.

Farr Hits Talcott's 'Town Hall'

State Sen. Fred Farr today threw a bucket of cold water on tonight's "town hall" meeting called by Congressman-elect Burt L. Talcott.

The Carmel Democrat said he believes Talcott is "foolish" to hold the meeting. He said he does not plan to attend it.

The meeting, at 8 o'clock in the board of supervisors chambers at the courthouse, is planned as a sort of public search for the best qualified candidate to succeed Talcott as supervisor for the county's second supervisorial district.

Hits Patronage

Apprised of the Senator's comment, Talcott told The Californian that "I don't think Senator Farr is much interested in the welfare of the second supervisorial district. He is more interested in the political patronage aspect of it."

Farr said that "Talcott apparently wants to name his successor or have some group name it. I think he is foolish to hold the meeting. Governor Brown has adequate means of ascertaining the most capable person for the job, one who will be truly representative of the second supervisorial district."

"The Governor does have a pipeline for information from Monterey county, and Farr is part of it, if not all of it," Talcott said.

The Senator also remarked that "if memory serves, Talcott, at the time he was nominated for Congress, said he several names repeatedly suggested for appointment to the board by citizen's groups and by Senator Fred Farr, Gov. Brown revealed.

Mayor Atteridge will serve an abbreviated term on the board, according to an opinion handed down last week by County Counsel Wm. Stoffers.

The appointee will serve until at least June, 1964 or November, 1964, the months of the county's next two major elections. He will have to stand for election if he wants to remain on the board.

Atteridge Is New Supervisor

Salinas Mayor Arthur C. Atteridge today was appointed to fill out the unexpired term of Congressman-elect Burt Talcott on the Monterey County Board of Supervisors.

Gov. Edmund G. Brown named the 52-year-old bachelor, who said he would "accept the appointment with pleasure."

Atteridge, a Democrat, said he will resign his post on the Salinas City Council when his appointment becomes effective early next month. At that time he will so resign as U. S. district commissioner, since the jobs are incompatible.

Must Run

Atteridge will serve on the county board until the election in 1964, at which time he must run for re-election. County Counsel William Stoffers made such a ruling last week.

Talcott, notified this morning of the appointment, said he was pleased because Atteridge's name was one of several picked last week "by an elite citizen's group." The recommendations of the group did not reach the governor, however, and the appointment was made upon the recommendation of State Sen. Fred Farr (D-Carmel).

and speculation pointed to the Monterey county board of supervisors Monday with the appointment of Salinas Mayor Arthur C. Atteridge. Gov. Edmund G. Brown named the mayor to Burt L. Talcott's unexpired term.

Atteridge, 48, is a lawyer and one of several names repeatedly suggested for appointment to the board by citizen's groups and by Senator Fred Farr, Gov. Brown revealed.

Mayor Atteridge will serve an abbreviated term on the board, according to an opinion handed down last week by County Counsel Wm. Stoffers.

The appointee will serve until at least June, 1964 or November, 1964, the months of the county's next two major elections. He will have to stand for election if he wants to remain on the board.

Democrats Won't Offer Candidate

By TOM WIEDER

Members of the Monterey County Democratic Central Committee agreed last night to refrain from recommending a successor to Supervisor Burt Talcott unless they are asked to do so.

After arguing for nearly an hour, most of the group conceded that volunteering a candidate for the non-partisan post could work in the long run to the detriment of the candidate or the committee itself.

Talcott will leave the 2nd (Salinas) district post at the end of the year because of his election to Congress last week.

Last night's meeting came exactly one week after a general election in which the county's Democratic candidates for Congress and for the State Assembly were buried by Republican opponents.

Last Race

William K. Stewart of Pacific Grove attorney who took only 38 per cent of the total vote from Talcott, told the committee that the race — his third since 1956 — would be his last.

Thanking committeemen warmly for their collective and individual support, Stewart said, "I've had my share of opportunities. The election has shown that this area is much more conservative, more Republican, than we'd realized. I'm not sure, however, if any other Democrat running could have made it. I honestly thought I had a good chance."

Stewart added, "I think the press was very fair to me in the campaign. I have no complaints."

'A Fair Shake'

Elvin Anderson of Monterey, a committeeman who was routed in his bid to unseat Assemblyman Alan G. Pattee of Corral de Tierra, also acknowledged "a fair shake" in his race and thanked his colleagues for their campaign help.

Anderson called, however, for a better-financed campaign organization and for an end to the "so-called Democratic-Republican marriage" between State Sen. Fred Farr (D-Carmel) and Pattee. Each has refrained from endorsing the other's opponent.

Anderson called it "unforgivable" that Farr went so far as to appear at a church musical program with Pattee at a time when he vainly sought campaign help from the Carmel Democrat. Anderson said that unless Farr will support his party's candidates the Democrats should look for another state senatorial candidate.

Charles A. Stewart of Carmel sought to keep the main business of the evening as short as possible by moving that the committee make no recommendation on Talcott's successor. Involvement of the committee, he said, "could get us out of our depth."

That motion was killed at the urging of James B. Campbell, also of Carmel, who said that although the decision is up to Gov. Edmund G. Brown the committee might at least have its 2nd District members review applicants and put the full group in a position to make a recommendation.

"We can't avoid our responsibility," Campbell said. "The quicker we realize it, the quicker we'll appear to be more responsible."

Both Views

If the committee recommends the person who is appointed, Henry Fulton of Salinas argued, the public might think the appointment was a political one.

"If we're ignored, then this committee looks like an impotent body," he added.

Frances Anderson of Monterey snapped, "This body never does anything, so I don't see how it could ever get into trouble. The Republicans aren't afraid to back anybody."

"The reason the Democrats haven't won is that they haven't got on their hind legs and fought for what they think is right," Don Coffill of Moss Landing charged.

"I don't think we should wait until we hear that some Republican has gotten the job. It sounds to me as if they (the Republicans) have gotten their machinery working in here to keep us from making a recommendation."

By a sizeable voice vote, however, the committee approved a motion by Patricia Lane of Carmel to wait until a recommendation is sought but, in the meantime, have 2nd District members screen candidates and seek out qualified persons who might be backed. Second District committeemen are Ted Fletcher, Winston Nelson, Lawrence Shostak, Donald Hamburger, James May and Chairman Robert Tuttle.

Stewart Won't Seek Office Again

William K. Stewart of Pacific Grove, defeated three times in campaigns for Congress, pledged he never will seek political office again last night.

"The new 12th district is much more conservative much more Republican than we realized," Stewart told fellow-Democrats at a central committee meeting here at the courthouse.

"I don't know if any other candidate for the Democrats could have won. I doubt it," he said, in reference to Republican Congressman-elect Burt Talcott's 28,000-vote victory margin in last week's election.

Stewart thanked the committee for its support and offered his services for future party work. He added that he does not feel that he is the "interim leader" of the party in this district.

He said he felt press coverage of his campaign "was very fair."

Another defeated candidate,

Assembly nominee Elvin Anderson of Monterey, attacked what he labeled as a Republican-Democratic "marriage" that hurt his own campaign. He soon made it clear he was referring to State Sen. Fred Farr (D-Carmel) and Assemblyman Alan G. Pattee (R-Salinas).

"If Farr will not support a Democratic candidate, I think we should run a candidate for the state senate in the primary election," said Anderson bitterly.

Anderson observed that Farr and Pattee appeared jointly before a Seaside ministerial group.

"This to me is unforgivable," said Anderson.

Committee chairman Robert Tuttle of Salinas said the matter was "a very sensitive spot with us Democrats," and would merit consideration.

In other action last night, the committee:

Tabled action on application by Salinas insurance man Cliff Wiley for Chualar postmastership soon to be vacated by Mrs. Anna Brown, pending recommendation from committeeman William Smart of King City.

Recommended to U.S. Sen. Clair Engle (D-Calif.), appointment of Salinas letter carrier Lawrence Mullins to Salinas rural carrier route.

Was advised that Salinas area Democratic headquarters was $500 "in the hole" after the recent campaign.

Monterey Peninsula Herald Tuesday, Nov. 20, 1962.

Redding Says He'd Accept Offer for Supervisor's Seat

SALINAS — William J. Redding, a supervisor from the Third District for 20 years, told The Herald yesterday he would accept an appointment to the soon-to-be-vacated Second District seat "if I don't have to fight my friends for it."

Redding, 68, now lives in Salinas and is eligible for appointment to the position to be vacated in January by Congressman-elect Burt Talcott.

He has retired from his activities as a bean dealer but still farms in the Salinas and Greenfield areas.

A resident of Monterey County since 1930, he served on the board of supervisors from 1938 to 1958.

The appointment is to be made by Gov. Edmund G. Brown, and there has been no indication as to who it might be.

Other possibilities mentioned are Salinas Mayor Arthur Atteridge, Salinas High School teacher Winston Nelson, ex-Salinas Mayor Fred Moffitt, and Alisal attorney William L. Stewart.

Talcott has announced his intention to form a non-partisan committee of Second District citizens to make a recommendation to the governor.

Last week he advised the Republican County Central Committee to stay out of the matter.

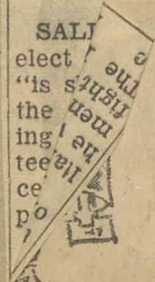

The Democratic County Central Committee decided to have a recommendation ready in case anyone asks for it.

State Sen. Fred Farr, expected to have considerable influence on the governor's choice, has been noncommittal.

County Educators Want Language Classes for Bilingual Students

CALEXICO — A state education committee today heard testimony that non-English speaking children are causing a problem in schools throughout the Valley.

The committee, headed by Sen. Albert Rodda, D-Sacramento, was told that Mexican children, who have never attended school before, are attending schools in the Valley. Carl L. Varner, district superintendent of schools in the Calexico Union High School and Calexico Elementary Districts, told the committee the language problem is the only problem the Mexican children have.

Other school superintendents throughout the Valley agreed with Varner that special language programs should be set up for students and teachers.

Varner said 153 Mexican children that have difficulty with English enrolled in schools in his district during the 1961-62 school year.

He said there is no way to predict how many non-English speaking students will enter school each year because it depends on the farm labor problem and how often their parents are shifted from job to job.

Varner recommended to the committee these steps to remedy the problem:

1. Consider additional state aid to the language handicapped pupils the same as for the physically handicapped.

2. Consider the possibility of Calexico and other towns on the border being classified as federal impacted areas due to the influx of immigrant children.

Varner said at this point Mexican children are "forced to learn English in a sink or swim manner."

He said the Mexican children have little trouble getting along with the English-speaking children. Most of them want to learn to speak English, he said.

Varner said children in the lower class levels in the Calexico schools are integrated into the regular classrooms when they first enroll. He said the high school has a special language class which they attend.

Discuss Funds

For Monterey Breakwater

Monterey officials yesterday indicated that they would try to produce an early commitment that the city will raise its one third share of the cost of a proposed $6 million federal companion breakwater.

The matter was discussed at an informal meeting yesterday in the office of City Manager Alfred D. Coons.

Present were Mayor L. M. (Sparky) Pollard, Councilman George Clemens, Congressman-elect Burt L. Talcott; State Sen. Fred Farr of Carmel and his administrative assistant, John Zierold; and Allen Griffin, publisher of The Herald.

The meeting was held in the wake of a recent letter from the district office of the U. S. Corps of Engineers for Rivers and Harbors.

In the letter, district engineer John A. Morrison expressed the view that a $90,000 appropriation for final breakwater planning could be lost unless the city produces a commitment as to the local contribution.

The $90,000 in planning funds was voted at the past session of Congress.

Various ideas were discussed as to how the local share can be raised but no definite decisions were reached.

Farr to Appear At Marin Highway Hearing Thursday

State Sen. Fred Farr (D-Carmel) today said he will appear at a state highway commission meeting in Marin County tomorrow relative to a proposed shoreline highway in that county.

Farr said he has been invited to the meeting by State Sen. John F. McCarthy (R-Marin) and other interested parties.

Farr said he is extremely interested in the state's proposed scenic highway program and will carry legislation for such a program during the 1963 Legislature.

For this reason, he said he has a particular interest in what is done in Marin. "They should be very careful in building a highway in the west side of Marin. If they do build it there, they should be very careful to insure that it is the right kind of highway. It is important not only to Marin but to the entire State of California. . . . It can be done in good taste or done very poorly."

Delay Urged

GOP, Demos Fight 'Scenic' Freeway

The Republican and Democratic State chairmen spoke with one voice yesterday in urging a delay in adoption of a route for a so-called "scenic freeway" along Marin county's shoreline.

The calls for a delay were roundly applauded by an audience of more than 500 which packed the auditorium of the Park Elementary School in Mill Valley.

"Let's not build now and plan later," the State Highway Commission was told by

GOP Chairman Caspar Weinberger. "There is no greater mistake."

"We should take a long and careful look at this plan," said Democratic Chairman Roger Kent.

The Highway Commission was holding its "final" public hearing on the controversial route, which would stretch 20.5 miles from Highway 101 near Mill Valley to a point 2.8 miles south of Olema on the coast.

State Senator John F. McCarthy (Rep-San Rafael), strongly supported by the Redwood Empire Association, called for approval of the route "at the earliest date possible."

But State Senator Fred

Farr (Dem-Carmel), originator of the proposed scenic highway system now being worked out by the Legislature, said "there is no urgent need" for the route.

POSTPONEMENT

"It would be wise," said Farr, "to postpone adoption until the Legislature in 1963 has had a chance to spell out its views on the scenic highway . . . and to give Marin county the time and opportunity to complete its West Marin Master Plan" which will be finished in about six months.

"The present route up for early adoption would be a subsidy to the subdividers," said Joel Gustafson, spokesman for the 700-member Point Reyes Seashore Foundation.

"This route looks as though it were deliberately planned to destroy as much shoreline as possible," said Bruce Kilgore, managing editor of the Sierra Club's publications.

BOOS

There were boos and cat-calls from the audience when Jack Craemer, president of the Redwood Empire Association, called for adoption of the freeway route as soon as possible "to bring in more tourists and to broaden the tax base."

Chairman Frank Myer of the Redwood Highway Committee insisted, however, that what the commission was considering was "the best possible route, and there's no use waiting for the planners."

The route in question, known as "Line C," would cut through the Tennessee Valley, pass east of Muir Beach, cross Green Gulch and the entrance to Frank Valley, above Stinson Beach and along the northern tip of Bolinas Lagoon.

500 Urge Delay on Marin 'Freeway'

By WILLIAM EARLE

Five hundred persons crowded into the auditorium of the Park Elementary School in Mill Valley yesterday to protest an early adoption of a proposed scenic freeway route in western Marin County.

The occasion was the final public hearing on a new route for Highway 1 that was recommended last March by the State Division of Highways to the State Highway Commission.

MASTER PLAN

Conservation groups and private individuals urged the commission to delay any final adoption until a master plan for western Marin County is completed and until the State Legislature defines standards for scenic highways.

But Robert B. Bradford,

State Director of Public Works and commission chairman, did not give them much reason for optimism.

"Normally we decide within 60 to 90 days after these final Highway Commission hearings," he said at the beginning of the meeting.

"Whether or not we can do that in this case I don't know, but we will try."

STANDARDS NOT SET

He assured the audience that the road would be built to scenic highway standards, but he conceded that such standards are not now in existence.

Mrs. Mary Summers of Kentfield, president of the Marin Conservation League and former county planning director, noted that at present there is no such thing as a scenic highway.

"If you approve the route today," she told the commission, "it would automatically be given freeway status — at least legally."

MCCARTHY WARNING

State Senator John F. McCarthy of Marin County urged the adoption of a route "at the earliest date possible," but he tempered his remarks by adding:

"As a conservationist, I urge you to take every possible precaution and plan with our local representatives to preserve in every way possible the beauties of our Marin County shoreline."

McCarthy had invited State Senator Fred Farr of Monterey County, author of legislation to establish a scenic highway system in California, to the meeting, but Farr did not agree with his colleague.

FARR URGES DELAY

"Senator McCarthy invited me here but he didn't know what I would say. I urge you to delay taking any final action. This is some of the most beautiful country in America and I am extremely concerned about what happens to it."

DEMO-GOP DUO

He pleaded that consulting landscape architects, engineers, and planners be consulted "before and not after the route is selected in order to save all that can be saved." "They should try to make the highway look as though it grew there," Senator Farr concluded.

Sitting beside each other on the side of the conservationists were Caspar Weinberger, chairman of the Republican State Central Committee, and Roger Kent, northern California chairman of the Democratic State Central Committee.

Weinberger, who was representing the Scenic Roads Association, urged the commissioners "not to get into the position where we are building now and planning later."

Others opposing any early adoption of a freeway route included Dr. Joel Gustafson, president of the Point Reyes National Seashore Foundation, and Bruce Kilgore of the Sierra Club.

Association and managing editor of the Marin Independent-Journal, who strongly urged the improvement of Highway 1.

"We feel certain we could attract more vacationers if this scenic road at the gateway to the coastal area is improved," he remarked.

Backing him were three county Supervisors: Andrew Fagiani of Napa County, Everett Lampson of Sonoma County, and Joseph Scaramella of Mendocino County.

SUGGESTION BOOED

on the freeway "to increase visitor traffic and bring in dollars."

The proposed scenic route covers 20.5 miles. It would leave Highway 101, at Manzanita, just south of the Richardson Bay Bridge, travel west through Tennessee Valley to the coast, pass east of Muir Beach, and extend north to a point 2.8 miles from Olema.

Even though the route

State Promises Scenic Parkway Through Marin

Chairman Robert Bradford of the State Highway Commission said yesterday the state was going to build "a low-speed scenic parkway" along the Marin County coast.

Bradford made the statement to more than 500 persons in Mill Valley who had gathered for the final hearing on the freeway route.

Bradford told protestors that there was little hope that the freeway could be delayed, but said that the state "would try to protect your county and not despoil it."

State Sen. Fred Farr (D-Carmel) urged delay in adopting the route, saying "it would be wise to postpone adoption until the legislature in 1963 has had a chance to spell out its views on the scenic highway."

Bradford told protestors that State Division of Highway figures show that density in Marin will be high in the future, and that "if people are coming there, there must be a road."

"We are going to build a low-speed scenic parkway," he said, "not a freeway. Forget the word freeway. We used the word freeway because it's in our freeway and expressway law. It's a legal expression."

The road would be a 20.5-mile stretch from Highway 101 at Manzanita, near Mill Valley, to a point 2.8 miles south of Olema on the coast. It was recommended last March by the state.

Jack Craemer, president of the Redwood Empire Assn., drew boos and cat-calls from the audience when he called for adoption of the freeway route as soon as possible "to bring in more tourists and broaden the tax base."

500 Protest Marin County Scenic Freeway Plan

Special to The Bee

MILL VALLEY, Marin Co. About 500 persons gathered yesterday in the Park Elementary School here to protest early adoption of a proposed scenic freeway from Mill Valley to the coast and along the shore in western Marin County to a point near Olema.

The occasion was the final public hearing before the state highway commission on the proposed new route for Highway 1 recommended last March by the state division of highways.

The proposed route covers 20.5 miles. It would leave Highway 101 at Manzanita, south of the Richardson Bay Bridge, travel west through Tennessee Valley to the coast, pass east of Muir Beach, and extend north to a point 2.8 miles from Olema.

Conservation groups and private individuals urged the commission to delay any final adoption until a master plan for western Marin County is completed and until the state legislature defines standards for scenic highways.

Robert B. Bradford, state director of public works and chairman of the commission, gave assurances the road would be built to scenic highway standards, but conceded such standards are not now specified by law.

A dozen of the bay area's most distinguished planners, architects and landscape architects joined earlier in the day to protest the proposed freeway as a case of "poor planning."

In a letter to Governor Edmund G. Brown they urged intervention to preserve the beauty of the Pacific Coast in Marin County.

Denounce Plan

Those denouncing the state's plan to convert the 20.5 miles of the coast into a so-called "scenic highway" included William W. Wurster, architect and dean of the college of environmental design, and T. J. Kent, Jr., chairman of regional planning, both of the University of California.

In the plea to the governor, the group complained the state is proceeding with the freeway plan even though the legislature soon will consider specifications for a state scenic highway system which would "fundamentally" affect the proposed route.

In their letter, the planners noted the area west of Mt. Tamalpais has a population of only 6,000 and they charged the $30 million freeway is not intended for present residents but for future subdivisions.

"Such developments," they asserted, "are not needed in this area, which is outside the bowl of the bay hills."

60-90 Days

Bradford told the audience in the Park School the commission normally decides freeway routes within 60 to 90 days after final hearings.

"Whether or not we can do that in this case I don't know, but we will try," he said.

State Senator John F. McCarthy of Marin County urged early adoption of a western Marin County freeway, saying it is inevitable that western Marin will grow.

McCarthy did not specifically advocate the Mill Valley-Olema route at the commission hearing, but said any new road should be built to preserve the area's natural beauties.

McCarthy had invited State Senator Fred Farr of Monterey County, author of legislation to establish a scenic highway system in California, to the hearing, but Farr did not agree with McCarthy.

Extremely Concerned

"I urge you to delay taking any final action," he told the commission. "This is some of the most beautiful country in America and I am extremely concerned about what happens to it."

He pleaded that consulting landscape architects, engineers and planners be consulted "before and not after the route is selected in order to save all that can be saved."

"They should try to make the highway look like it grew there."

In the minority was Jack Craemer of Greenbrae, president of the Redwood Empire Association and managing editor of the Marin Independent-Journal, who urged improvement of Highway 1.

Backing him were three county supervisors, Andrew Fagiani of Napa County, Everett Lampson of Sonoma County and Joseph Scaramella of Mendocino County.

CALIFORNIA'S MENTALLY RETARDED CHILDREN

The California Council for Mentally Retarded Children may ask for legislation; (1) Requiring compulsory education of the severely retarded children; (2) An expansion of the Short-Doyle Act (providing state matching funds to community mental health services) so as to provide counseling services for problems related to retarded children; (3) Authorizing expansion of crippled children services program of home visits to homes of retarded children.

In California we have 12,000 mentally retarded children in state institutions with 2300 on the waiting list, one-half of whom are in critical need of institutional care. I am advised that the cost per bed in these institutions is approximately $18,000 and that operating costs per patient are approximately $3,000 per year. Approximately 1200 of these patients could be taken care of more satisfactorily and more cheaply at home if local facilities were available.

A hopeful sign is that 1 out of 5 of the severely retarded children can with proper training contribute partially to his own support, while 3 out of 4 of the less severely retarded can learn to be completely self sufficient and self sustaining with proper education.

Experts Clear the Way For Commercial Code

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — away with chattel mortgages. An obscure but important and conditional sales conference of legal experts in the State Capitol during the weekend sought to clear the way for California to join the 18 states which have adopted the Uniform Commercial Code.

State Sen. Fred. S. Farr (D-Carmel), said he hoped the work of the Senate Judiciary Advisory Committee on the Uniform Commercial Code would lead to the code's adoption by the legislature in the forthcoming session.

The code affects industrial methods of financing in the commercial field. Designed to bring about more uniformity in the practices of different states, it was first adopted in Pennsylvania in 1953 and most recently in New York and Illinois.

Approval of the code in California would mean doing

The matter was taken up by the 1959 and 1961 legislatures but referred for further study.

The weekend meeting brought together, according to Farr, "the best brains in California" in the field. Its purpose was to work out remaining problems and submit firm recommendations for a California uniform code to Farr's subcommittee.

The lawmaker said he hoped the subcommittee in turn would introduce it in the legislature, "as soon as possible in 1963."

Represented at the meeting were persons associated with the California Commission on Uniform State Laws, the state bar committee on bankers code, the California bankers committee on the bankers code, credit managers and county recorders. Discussion concentrated on a number of highly technical laws. George Richter, chairman of the meeting, said the hope was to bring about "uniformity to the greatest possible extent and still meet California's individual problems and laws."

BIG GAME CONTROL HEARING

SENATOR FRED S. FARR (D), Twenty-fifth senatorial district, comprised of Monterey County, member of the Senate Fact Finding Committee on Natural Resources, announced that this Committee will hold a public hearing December 11 at 10 a. m., in room 4203 of the State Capitol in Sacramento to consider the policies and procedures of the Department of Fish and Game regarding big game depredation control and other special big game hunts.

"The laws of the state regarding big game management, as well as the policies of the Fish and Game Commission undergo almost continuous change," said Senator Farr, "to meet the changing condition of the state's wildland area. It is necessary to review current policies and laws as often as possible to determine if they are still appropriate."

Senator Farr noted that individual concepts of big game management have always varied to a considerable degree and that it is necessary for all those interested in this subject to express their views either at the hearing or in writing to the Committee so that the Committee will be apprised of prevailing conditions in each geographical area of the state.

CONGRESSMAN-ELECT TALCOTT'S SUCCESSOR ON BOARD OF SUPERVISORS

There has been much speculation and interest concerning who Governor Brown will appoint to fill Congressman-Elect Burt Talcott's position on the Board of Supervisors. Although Governor Brown is not in need of screening committees, having adequate means of ascertaining who will be best qualified to fill this important non-partisan position, I am sure he will gladly welcome suggestions.

Teacher-exchange Plan Advanced by Sen. Farr

A teacher-exchange program to help alleviate an anticipated shortage of foreign language teachers in California will be proposed at the coming session of the legislature by State Sen. Fred Farr (D-Carmel). Farr is a member of the Senate Education Committee.

Farr said that under his proposal public school teachers could be sent abroad under an exchange program, which in turn would bring foreign teachers to this country as a stop-gap measure in meeting the projected shortage.

In 1965 a law already enacted requires that a foreign language be taught beginning at least in the sixth grade. He said it has been predicted that in that year there will be a shortage of some 2,000 foreign language teachers in schools of the state.

Practical Skills

Farr said the exchange plan would permit California teachers to acquire practical foreign language skills in the country whose language they plan to teach. And as an added benefit it would give them "a far sharper image of a round world than they could hope to acquire from ordinary language study in American universities."

"As a corollary benefit," he pointed out, "California public schools would have the added good fortune of temporary teachers who would not only be speakers of the language they would teach, but who could also give the students a much clearer understanding of,

for example, Latin American countries and their prevailing culture."

Farr has written to Francis Keppel, U. S. commissioner of education, asking advice on how federal assistance might be obtained for the project.

Present Program

He pointed to the present federal program in which foreign teachers are brought to the United States under the auspices of the state department. The cost of their travel and subventions for their living costs are provided by the U. S. government.

"What I have in mind," Farr wrote to Keppel, "is finding some manner in which the State of California could participate in such a program by bringing teachers here to give instruction in foreign language while our California teachers are at work abroad."

"I am deeply convinced that some resourceful and imaginative action is necessary if the California school system is to meet its obligations in providing this country with products of its school system who have the foreign language skills necessary to meet the demands of a shrinking world," Farr said.

Farr Slates Measure on Scenic Roads

State Sen. Fred Farr (D-Carmel) will introduce his long-awaited scenic highways bill in the state legislature next month.

Farr said that he will make the bill, designed to preserve the scenic beauty of the Coast highway and other attractive routes, one of his first projects when he returns to Sacramento Jan. 7.

The bill would provide for a system of scenic highways—not freeways—in an effort to avoid the sweeping changes involved in some construction work.

Senator Farr also said he plans to introduce a bill to eliminate fraud in some charity drives. The measure would hit at some organizations, particularly in Los Angeles, where little of the money contributed goes for the cause itself.

Farr on Scenic Highways:

'Will Introduce Bill In 1963'

State Sen. Fred S. Farr (D-Carmel) will introduce new scenic highway legislation during the 1963 session of the legislature, he said in his 25th senatorial district newsletter today.

He said that Gov. Edmund G. (Pat) Brown strongly supports the scenic highway legislation he plans to introduce.

Farr said the State Interdepartmental Committee, which has studied the problem for several years, will submit a report to the legislature on standards and criteria and a recommended scenic highway system.

"Of parallel importance in the scenic highway system," Farr said, "are: (1) the attention given by the state to highway right-of-way problems concerning roadbed, curves, cuts and fills, aesthetic design of bridges, tunnels, overpasses and interchanges, and the effect on community values; and (2) local government protection of the scenic corridor, meaning the immediate area outside but adjacent to the highways which the passing motorist sees from his car.

"Monterey County is particularly deserving of credit for its attempt to protect the scenic corridor on Big Sur State Highway 1 and on the Salinas-Monterey Highway."

Farr said that a recent effort worthy of mention is what Monterey County Planning Director Ed DeMars has done with the Toro Estate subdivision. DeMars originated the idea of integrating planting at the edge of the Salinas-Monterey highway with that of the adjacent subdivision. Farr said the State Division of Highways has indicated its desire to cooperate with counties such as Monterey in developing scenic conservation easements adjacent to state scenic highways.

Regarding other matters, Farr said he feels the 1963 legislature ought to provide state funds immediately to make an inventory of present educational television facilities to develop a plan for a statewide network.

He noted that Monterey County leads the nation in sugar produced per acre.

Farr said, "Thanks to a praiseworthy cooperative effort on the part of Gen. Orlando C. Troxel of Fort Ord and Paul Aurignac, San Ardo rancher and member of the State Board of Forestry, a fire-fighting training school will be conducted at Hunter-Liggett Military Reservation this summer."
